Marines Are Called Out
To Assist in Work of Keeping Flames Out of San Diego.

Los Angeles, September 23.—A call for volunteers was issued by federal forestry officials in Los Angeles and Pasadena tonight as a half dozen fires continued to sweep through timber and brush land of southern California.

The loss from the fires, in damage to timber and watershed lands alone, was placed at approximately $150,000,000 by government officials.

Many ranch houses are believed to have been destroyed and eight persons were burned and injured during the past three days.

The situation was described as the worst in southern California's history.

Marines and sailors from bases at San Diego were sent to fight a fire raging in San Diego county and every idle man was conscripted from the streets.

The fires burned on three sides of Los Angeles, and a heavy pall of smoke has partially obscured the sun for the past two days.

100,000 Acres Burned.
In the San Diego district alone, fires in the past three days have covered 100,000 acres. Fires in the Los Angeles district have burned over nearly 70,000 acres.

Federal officials said that an arbitrary valuation of more than $900 an acre had been placed on the land which was covered by the flames.

Four were in southern California, three in the central part and six in the northern sections. Nearly 2,000 men were expected to be on the first lines.

Pesides the death toll and the valuable pasture and timber destroyed, the fires destroyed homes on ranches and in settlements. The dead are: Neil Lane, 36, Oakland; Edward Gassiot, 45; Peter Navarez, 43, all of Livermore, and Robert Buras, 58, Sonoma county rancher. Lane, Gassiot and Navarez were killed when the gasoline tank on a truck on which they were riding, was exploded by flames from a brush fire. Buras escaped by exhaustion while fighting a fire and died shortly afterwards.

One Blaze Is Controlled.
A fire was reported in the Sequoia National forest by the forest service, while two others were reported in San Mateo county. Four thousand acres had been burned over on San Pedro mountain.

The fire in Philbrick, north of Sterling City, had subsided after taking a toll of 100 acres of scattered timber and brush lands.

Six fires were reported raging in Mendocino county, while in Sonoma county the fires were said to be under control with one exception, that near Cloverdale which was threatening a hunting lodge owned by "Red" Grange and C. C. H. H.

Six hundred men were said to be fighting a blaze near Calistoga which already had caused damage to timber and orchard land estimated at $500,000.

Flames along three fronts in southern California engaged the attention of hundreds of men working to save homes and watersheds. The most serious fire was on the edge of the Santa Barbara National forest above Fillmore.

More than 40,000 acres of brush and timber lands near the San Diego-Riverside county line south of Corona had been swept over and fear was expressed for the safety of Warner's Hot Springs. Six ranches had been damaged.

The fire along the Bakersfield-Los Angeles route, where five motorists were severely burned, was racing east and west.

Red Cross Head Hears
Report of 2,200 Lives
Lost; Negro Is Killed by Guardman.

West Palm Beach, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—Fresh tragedy was added tonight to the week-old disaster wrought by the tropical hurricane when reports to the Red Cross said that 200 additional bodies had been found near the settlement of Pelican Bay.

Pelican Bay lies between Belle Glade and Pahokee, both of which were razed with great loss of life. A similar number of bodies were reported found across the water from Pelican Bay late yesterday and tonight's report caused the Red Cross to list 400 of the village's some 450 inhabitants among the dead and to raise its estimate of the total known dead to 1,200 persons.

Discovery of the bodies was said to have been made as relief workers pushed steadily through the area, carrying on throughout the Sabbath day the work of mercy to survivors of the storm and the recovery of the bodies.

Prior pauses were made in the stricken towns for religious worship but in other respects there was no indication that the day was Sunday. The blow of hummers was heard on every hand as the task of rehabilitation went forward, while the relief trucks and boats continued their journeys.

It being impossible now to identify the dead or haul out the bodies for burial, cremation was resorted to or bodies were buried where they were found.

All Indians Safe.
A negro was reported shot and killed by a national guardsman doing police duty here. The negro, officials said, was shot after the guardsman accompanied a policeman to the negro section to make an arrest for petty larceny. The negro was said to have attacked the guardsman with a bottle.

Definite reports said that all the Seminole Indians were safe although one hunting party was said to have been in a narrow escape from the hurricane. E. L. Lasher, Miami Indian village owner, said all had been accounted for except some Creek Indians who were reported missing.

A little fear was felt for these since the Indians are practiced in the lore of storm and wilderness.

D. C. Griger, sent by Howard W. Selby, chairman of the Palm Beach Red Cross committee, into the Everglades for an inspection, expressed his belief that 1,200 negroes and 70 white persons died in the hurricane. He placed property damage at 95 per cent.

Farm losses in the Everglades in Broward and Palm Beach counties were placed at $2,500,000 as a minimum by Fred H. Harris, agricultural expert of Miami, in a survey for the federal government. A conservative estimate of the immediate farm rehabilitation need is $300,000, said Mr. Harris, in order that a winter crop may be grown.

FARM LOSS PLACED
AT $2,500,000.
Miami, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—Farmers of the rich Lake Okechobee section, whose crops were destroyed by wind and flood in the terrific hurricane of last week, now are seeking a supply of seeds to replant and rehabilitate themselves.

"Where and how can we get more seed for the coming season's crop?" they ask, Fred H. Harris, agricultural specialist of the Miami Chamber of Commerce, said today in making public the findings of a survey of the situation in the region.

During the past week Harris has visited the devastated fields in Broward and Palm Beach counties and closed an estimated loss of $2,500,000.

ATLANTA LEADING

City Has Given Almost Five Times as Much as Any Other Outside State of Florida.

A generous southland has heard the call of need in the storm-swept areas and today was answering through the Red Cross and Salvation Army with thousands of dollars and carloads of wearing apparel.

Through the newspapers and over radio the appeal for thousands who lost their all in the terrific hurricane that swept the islands of the West Indies, the Bahamas and turned inland over a portion of the east coast of Florida, taking hundreds of lives and causing millions of dollars in property damage and from every nook and hamlet, as well as the cities, funds and clothing has come.

The call for funds and clothing was augmented today from pulpits of churches and special collections were made, sending the total to higher levels, while the Salvation Army institutions throughout the area were flooded with bundles of clothing.

While fraternal orders, civic organizations and individuals have added their efforts to aiding funds, radio stations gave a portion of their time to urging immediate contributions.

Atlanta had raised $23,875 last night and with church collections today, it was estimated the city had passed the halfway mark of its $500,000 quota. Savannah had raised $32,000 and expected to reach the $100,000 allotment mark in a few days.

School Children Help.
New Orleans subscriptions where Dr. W. E. Winship, local Red Cross chairman, made a radio appeal had raised $6,000 of the $100,000 quota. School children of New Orleans were lending their aid toward reaching the goal.

Memphis, Nashville and Chattanooga reported relief funds growing with clothing shipments already made and more to follow.

A receiving room for summer clothing donations for Port Rican and Florida storm victims at Louisville, where more than $4,000 of the city's $21,000 quota has been raised. Other southern cities were reported making a generous response.

A check for $6,400 was forwarded to national Red Cross headquarters from Birmingham yesterday and a quantity of clothing was forwarded direct to the disaster-struck area of Florida. Montgomery reported more than a tenth of its $10,000 allotment raised, while Mobile reported a like situation. A quantity of clothing has been gathered at Mobile, and a number of the boats will be shipped Tuesday to Porto Rico aboard a Waterman line steamer which is expected to leave there.

The Mallory line also said its steamers would transport relief to Florida without charge.

A donation of $10,000 from the Knights of Pythias was announced at Columbia, S. C., where Alva M. Lumpkin, supreme grand chancellor, issued an appeal to Pythian lodges to contribute to the fund.

Churches throughout Virginia today took up special collections to aid the rapidly growing fund in that state. In North Carolina, Asheville led in contributions with $3,500, while Charlotte reported more than half of its $4,500 raised.

Governor Smith.

New York, September 23.—(AP)—United States Senator John J. Blaine, of Wisconsin, republican, in a statement issued at his home, Roscoe, Wis., today and made public by democratic national headquarters here, announced that he will not support nor vote for Herbert Hoover.

"No republican ever has any political allegiance to Mr. Hoover as president-elect," he said. "In the campaign of 1918 he urged the election of a democratic congress. He said 'I am for President Wilson's leadership not only in the conduct of the war but also in the negotiations of peace and afterwards in America's burden in the rehabilitation of the world.'"

Sought 1920 Nomination.

Honolulu, September 23.—(AP)—A threatening crowd which congregated around the Honolulu jail where Yukata Fukunaga, young Japanese kidnaper and slayer of 10-year-old Gill Jamieson, son of a Honolulu banker, is held, was dispersed today by cold water directed by firemen.

The young Japanese, who carried out his crime in much the same fashion as did William E. Hickman, youthful slayer of Marion Parker, daughter of a Los Angeles banker, remained unperturbed as the jeers of the crowd outside the jail reached his ears. He speaks excellent English and was graduated at the head of his class in high school here. He is 19 years old.

Fukunaga was apprehended through a purchase he made with one of the bills he received as ransom for the Jamieson boy. The boy's father had turned over $4,000 to the kidnaper upon demand.

The Japanese went to the school attended by the victim, obtained his release from classes through a bribe and spirited him away to his death.

Lad Fights Slayer.
After a struggle in which the ten-year-old banker's son almost overpowered the Japanese, the kidnaper struck the youth with a blunt instrument, knocked him unconscious and then strangled him. The child's body was found in a ditch near the school.

The Japanese returned to his room after the killing and wrote the ransom note to the boy's father, Frederick Jamieson, vice-president of the Hawaiian Trust company, the father met the kidnaper and paid him $4,000 for the return of the boy. In his anxiety for the child's welfare the parent did not permit police detection.

HIT-AND-RUN AUTO

OF JOHN L. LUDWIG

The car that figured in the hit-and-run collision near Barnesville Saturday night in which Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Goddard, of Griffin, were injured was not the property of John L. Ludwig, of Atlanta, Mr. Ludwig declared Sunday.

Mr. Ludwig, president of Louis, Inc., 95 Luckie street, explained that the automobile was sold to a local dealer on August 31 and that the dealer later had sold it to another person without removing the license tag. This person, he believes, was the driver who failed to stop after striking the Goddard machine.

The condition of Mrs. Goddard Sunday was reported as very favorable. Her husband was only slightly hurt. Barnesville police reported.

300 Burned and Trampled as Capacity Audience Tries To Escape Madrid Blaze.

Madrid, September 23.—(AP)—Reuters, Ltd., tonight reported that several hundred persons are believed to have perished in a fire which broke out tonight during a performance in the Novedades theater. More than 300 injured are under treatment at hospitals and emergency stations.

The theater was packed to the doors with a typical Sunday audience for a performance of "La Mejor Del Puerto" when, during a brief intermission, there was a great burst of flames on the stage.

The theater holds 3,000 and the capacity audience rushed for the exits. The occupants of the stalls and boxes were able to leave before the flames spread into the auditorium but those in the galleries were less fortunate and exits were soon choked with struggling masses.

The Novedades is one of the oldest and largest theaters in Madrid. The flames spread rapidly through the wooden fittings.

Premier on Scene.
Hundreds of persons were trampled by those who pushed on from behind while others suffocated and doubtless burned to death.

The interior of the theater was soon roaring with flames which spread to adjacent buildings. Premier De Rivero and municipal authorities hurriedly went to the scene.

Every available automobile was commandeered to help remove the injured. A regiment of infantry from the Novedades theater fire tonight at 300. Women and children were said to have been trampled to death in frantic rush for the doors which were soon jammed with bodies.

Police and firemen worked frantically to clear the exits by dragging the crushed bodies into the streets but the panic-stricken crowd inside trampled down victims even faster. Army engineers cut openings in the building with for the doors which were soon jammed with bodies.

When the firemen finally managed to clear the doors sufficiently to enter, they began to carry out bodies on an unbroken line of stretchers. They were mostly women and children, either crushed or burned to death.

The Express story says that when the fire started the orchestra bravely struck up a tune in an effort to calm the audience. An explosion behind the stage, however, killed several musicians and added to the panic. Further explosions occurred while the fire raged on.

Hurled from his motorcycle when it struck an automobile which swerved suddenly in front of his path Sunday noon, Louis Roland, 16, of 24 Chapel road, drug store delivery boy, was in a dying condition at Grady hospital late Sunday, according to doctors.

No report of the accident had been made at police headquarters, but witnesses said that Roland, returning from a delivery, was proceeding along Hollywood road, near Bankhead highway when an automobile passed him to the left and swerved suddenly to the right into a driveway, causing the boy to crash into the machine.

Name of the driver of the automobile was not known. Roland was suffering from internal injuries and severe abrasions and lacerations about the face and head. Doctors at Grady said he could not live.

The youth was employed by the Ashby Street pharmacy. A clerk in the store is said to know the name of the driver of the automobile figuring in the crash.

MANLY SHOWS SMITH KNOWS PROBLEM

Basil Manly, a native of Greenville, S. C., although a young man, has jumped to the pinnacle of one of the most brilliant reporters and newspaper writers in the country. He is now staff correspondent of a group of the leading papers in various sections of the country. He has been added to the staff of The Constitution for the duration of the national presidential campaign and will write special articles dealing with its investigations of various vital issues. Today the second of these articles are presented. They deal with the farm relief question. One is the result of careful investigation into the views and record of Governor Al Smith on this important question. The other deals with the record and pronouncements of Herbert Hoover on the problem. They are presented here in parallel columns and form a most fascinating contribution to the literature of the current campaign.

Smith's Practical Hoover's Theory
Work for Farm Plan for Relief
Relief in State Not for Present

BY BASIL MANLY.
(Copyright, 1928, by Basil Manly.)
Washington, September 23.—Although Al Smith was born on the East Side of New York and probably never saw a cow or a silo until he was well grown, he is no stranger to the fundamental problems of American agriculture.

New York state in value of agricultural products ranks ninth and leads by a substantial margin such famous farm states as Minnesota, Nebraska and the Dakotas. Three-quarters of a million of her population live on farms which are valued at nearly two billion dollars. New York ranks first in the production of potatoes and hay is the second dairy state of the union.

Except for the advantages of greater diversification and nearness to markets, New York farmers have all the troubles of southern and western farmers, including crop surpluses and post-war deflation. And they are well enough organized to make themselves heard.

Studies Farm Problems.
As governor of New York during the period of the greatest agricultural distress, Smith has, therefore, found it necessary to study the farmers' problems and to aid within the limits of state activities, in their solution. At the same time he has had the good sense not to pose as a professional "farmer's friend," nor to do any fancy pitching for propaganda purposes.

He knows the farmers' marketing problems and in his messages has called attention to the wide spread that exists between the price the

ROBINSON SEEKS

Worn Out by Strenuous Campaign, Senator Retreats to Unannounced Spot in Arkansas Hills.

BY WALTER CHAMBLIN,
Associated Press Staff Writer.
Hot Springs, Ark., September 23.—(AP)—Seeking complete rest from the arduous work of the national campaign, Senator Joe T. Robinson today went into seclusion for three days at the home of a friend in the Ozark mountains near this city.

The democratic vice presidential nominee after reaching here late today traveled several miles to the summer home of one of his old friends, which is situated on the shores of one of the many little lakes that are found in the mountain ranges.

He told press correspondents that he is anxious for an opportunity to relax from the campaign, which has just carried him through the "solid south," and ultimately will take him to the Pacific coast and back.

The senator said he felt he had to do a few days of holiday coming to him, and asked the press not to reveal his whereabouts.

Friends To Join Him.
He explained that he desired time to work up a number of speeches to be delivered on the trip through the west, and also a chance to do a little fishing.

"If you tell everybody where I am," he added, "there will be but little opportunity for me to catch up with the world's correspondence and prepare for the work still ahead."

Mr. Robinson was accompanied to his retreat in the Ozarks by a friend of many years' standing, William H. Martin, the man who more than a quarter of a century ago first placed Mr. Robinson's name in nomination for congress.

With Response of People to First Half of Campaign Speeches.

BY PAUL F. HALPERT,
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)
Governor Smith's Train En Route to Helena, Mont., September 23.—(AP)—In the home town of Thomas J. Walsh, who prosecuted the senate oil investigation, Governor Smith tomorrow night will lash into the republicans on the score of party responsibility. He intends particularly to challenge the contention of his opponent, Herbert Hoover, that the republican party "has always been a constructive, progressive party."

As his campaign train traveled northward through northern Colorado toward Montana today, the democratic presidential nominee, who last night in a speech in Denver assailed Mr. Hoover and the republicans on the waterpower issue, disclosed that he would hammer away at his opposition in his address tomorrow night from Helena.

Studies Interview.
Before revealing his plans to more than 20 newspapermen at a Sunday press conference in the club car, the New York governor inquired: "Who has the morning paper that has the Hoover interview in it? Did anyone see that in the Sunday morning paper?"

"Yes," he was told, "on the front page of 'The Denver Post.'"

A copy of the newspaper was produced and for several minutes the nominee, chewing on his cigar as he sat in the midst of reporters, studied the Associated Press dispatch from Washington which quoted Mr. Hoover's remarks yesterday to a visiting collection of republicans from Maryland.

"Well, here it is," he said finally, and then dictated:

"Mr. Hoover said that the government can only be conducted with a definite party organization. He further said: 'It goes to the very root of the organization of our form of government and of democracy itself. We intend to go forward as the republican party has always been a progressive, constructive party.'"

"You won't get a chance to write much today," the governor went on. "We only make a stop here for two, and you will get nothing tomorrow, so you can get busy this afternoon and say that I shall take up the challenge of the republican candidate and talk on the responsibility at Helena, Monday night."

"I shall talk on party responsibility, and I shall vigorously challenge the statement that the republican party has always been a constructive, progressive party."

"Will you make some reference to Senator Walsh in his home state?" he was asked.

"Yes."

"Doesn't Like Word."
"I don't like that word, but party responsibility makes it necessary."

"Teapot Dome and so forth?"

"Well, that would come in under Senator Walsh."

"Governor, do you want us to go as far as to say you will discuss the oil scandals in this speech?" one of the correspondents inquired.

"You can draw on your imagination and perhaps reach the conclusion

HOOVER HEADQUARTERS DENIES DRINK CHARGE

Washington, September 23.—(AP)—For the first time in the campaign, official cognizance of charges leveled at Herbert Hoover was taken today at the personal headquarters of the republican presidential candidate.

Hoover himself maintained silence but his secretary, George Akerson, flatly denied an allegation by Senator Bruce, democrat, Maryland, made in a speech last night that the nominee showed hypocrisy on the prohibition question because he had been known to drink intoxicating liquors.

"As a matter of fact," Akerson said, "Mr. Hoover has not taken a single drink of intoxicating liquor since he became a constitutional executive officer of the United States and has never had a drop of liquor served at his home."

Bruce quoted as his authority, Clarence Darrow, noted criminal lawyer of Chicago, who in a statement at his home added his denial to that of Akerson. Darrow declared that he had never made the statement attributed to him by Bruce that he had taken several drinks with Hoover and consequently had come out for prohibition.

Akerson said Hoover had never met Darrow in his life and that "consequently he could hardly have taken a drink with him."

The republican nominee spent his Sabbath quietly as is his custom. In the forenoon, he attended services at the historic Quaker meeting house at Sandy Springs, Md., a nearby town, accompanied by Mrs. Hoover and their son, Allan. The church, more than a century old, is one of Mrs. Hoover's favorite places of worship and the family has motored there twice within recent weeks.

Goes for Ride.

After dinner at home, Hoover went for an automobile ride into the nearby country accompanied by Allan and one or two friends. This is the candidate's method of recreation.

The remainder of the day was spent quietly with his family and a few friends who called at the 8 street residence.

Although the day marked the half way point between the time the nominee set out from his home in California to set up his campaign headquarters in Washington and the latter part of October, when he will begin his cross country trip to vote, the first four weeks of work in all probability have been less arduous than will be that of next month.

Already the campaign is growing in intensity and as he goes into his fervid closing days, he probably will be forced to expand the speaking program he has set for himself.

Even as his democratic opponent, Alfred E. Smith, trained his oratorical guns upon the normally republican west last week, new pleas were being presented to Hoover to enlarge his itinerary for the campaign.

Particularly strong were the appeals for him to carry his fight into Texas and for him to make a speech at Chicago on his return trip westward.

The candidate, however, has given no indication that he intends to alter the schedule of four speeches that he mapped out for himself shortly after he returned to Washington.

He is disposed to ignore the barbs sent in his direction by the democrats, resolutely continuing his course without reference to what his opponents may say. Most of his time since returning to Washington from Newark last week were spent in work on his Elizabethton, Tenn., speech and in conferences with various party leaders who called at his headquarters.

His first trip away from the headquarters was made yesterday, when he called upon President Coolidge at the white house and discussed the general phases of the campaign with the retiring chief of the party shortly after the president's return from his native state of Vermont and New England. Neither of them would discuss what particular aspects of the campaign they had gone over.

In contrast with the toll of last Monday and Tuesday, when the candidate was in the midst of his political invasion of northern New Jersey, he expects to spend the first days of this week at his headquarters, making plans instead of executing them, and writing speeches instead of delivering them.

How he will spend the latter part of the week yet is to be determined. For some time he has been anxious to break away from campaign routine to make a fishing trip on lower Chesapeake bay, but whether he will be able to do so this week is doubtful.

Port William, Ontario.—F. W. President Wilson's policies were popular, he was willing to capitalize those policies if the democratic party would nominate him.

Smith Consistent.

"Mr. Hoover was a part of President Wilson's administration. He served as President Wilson's food administrator and as a member of his war trade council. During the war Mr. Hoover was chairman of the United States Grain corporation that beat down the price of the farmers' wheat. He was also chairman of the United States sugar equalization board which boosted the price of sugar."

"I point out the fact in proof of his close association with President Wilson which no doubt led Mr. Hoover to believe he was the logical successor to the presidency as democratic nominee for president."

"The only difference between Governor Smith and Mr. Hoover is a period of eight years. Governor Smith has been consistently a democrat; Mr. Hoover has been willing to embrace either party for the presidential nomination."

Under these circumstances no one's republicanism can be questioned if he fails to vote for Mr. Hoover. From the party view, the republicans have no candidate excepting a candidate by adoption.

"Senator Norbeck of South Dakota summed up the character of Mr. Hoover when he said on the floor of the senate these words:

"But he (Hoover) was 43 years old before he took any part in this country. He should not be elected. He was not sufficiently interested in American political affairs to vote in a national election until after he was 43 years of age. His great fortune was amassed in British enterprises and in British territory. He was a member of the democratic administration of President Wilson. He was not sufficiently interested in the republican party until the landslide of 1920."

"Mr. Hoover is opposed to practically all of the policies of the great mass of progressive republicans and independent forward-thinking people of America. Hence, Mr. Hoover does not stand for the things for which I stand. I will not support him nor vote for him."

Mystery Accident.

C. B. Perry, 38, of 913 Jefferson street, was brought to Grady hospital in an unconscious condition early Sunday night following an automobile accident near Dallas, Ga. It was found that he was suffering from painful lacerations about the head and a possible fracture of the skull.

He was still unconscious at a late hour Sunday night and no definite details of the mishap could be learned. Mrs. Perry stated at the hospital that her husband is a steel worker in the mills at Alabama City, Ala., and was on the way back to his work after a visit to his home at the time he was hurt. The motorist who brought the injured man to the hospital stated that he thought Perry's car had turned over from some unknown cause.

Five other persons were treated at Grady hospital for minor injuries received in motor accidents Sunday. All were released from the hospital after treatment, and no details of the mishaps were obtained.

The injured were Joseph Boyd, 7, of 963 Pulliam street, a fractured left leg; Albert Jordan, 18, of 377 Grant street, lacerations about the head; J. D. Mangum, 9, of East Point, cuts and bruises about the face and body; J. W. Lott, 34, 308 Woodward avenue, abrasions about the body, and O. D. have always dreamed of returning to Japan," he told the police. "I wanted to send them more than anything else in the world. I planned to get this money and then I was going to the coast (presumably the states) for six or seven months. Then I would buy lots of new clothes and come back and make a confession."

"I would tell them I had made a fortune and would then send them to Japan. When they were well established there I was going to the police and make a confession."

Fukunaga, asked if he thought himself sane, replied: "I am not insane."

Squaring his shoulders and looking directly at his interrogator, he added: "I am absolutely responsible. I am blaming myself only. My mind is sound."

Asked what he thought about the crime, the Japanese prisoner said: "I think what I did was awful. I have nothing but contempt for myself and sorrow for my parents."

Fukunaga said he disliked the publicity he had received. He thought all editions of the newspapers carrying stories of the crime for the purpose of keeping in touch with the progress police made in hunting him, the youth remarked. He did not like being pictured as an arch criminal.

The prison official said today that Fukunaga had not slept from Tuesday night until last night when an opiate was given him.

Men Were Neighbors.

Brachmann and Pocheziel were neighbors. Both were married but Pocheziel's wife was slowly dying of tuberculosis. While she was still alive Mrs. Brachmann started a love affair with Pocheziel. She made plans then to remove her husband from the scene, police said.

After Mrs. Pocheziel died, Mrs. Brachmann induced Pocheziel to kill her husband. Three times she urged the man to a point where he attempted murder and each time he weakened at the critical moment.

First Pocheziel mixed poison in the woman's drink during a debauch. The dose was too weak or the intended victim was too rugged. After that failure, Mrs. Brachmann concocted another plot, police said. They got her husband drunk and left him to die in the snow on a cold, winter night. Pocheziel, however, lost his courage and carried the man home.

Women Tried Again.

The woman was not discouraged. She tried it again with poisoned mushrooms, but Brachmann—a regular giant in stature—recovered. Pocheziel was all for quitting but Mrs. Brachmann persuaded her lover to make a last attempt. This time she was on the scene to supervise activities. Like her literary counterpart, Therese Raquin in Zola's famous novel of that name, Mrs. Brachmann decided to drown her husband.

They got him drunk again and threw him in a well. His body was discovered the next day and the coroner declared death was accidental. Everything worked out perfectly, it seemed.

Then—like all perfect crimes—the terror of the act gripped the lovers. Mrs. Brachmann suspected her lover was about to tell of his act. She decided to kill him and to this end she attempted to win her daughter to a plan to do away with Pocheziel. The man overheard the conversation and loudly accused the woman of her crimes. The neighbors heard the quarrel and told police.

The couple was arrested and the man soon confessed. The woman held out for five days but now has placed her confession in hands of the police.

CHINA TO PAY U. S. $500,000 DAMAGES

Shanghai, September 23.—(AP)—The Chinese are expected to pay approximately $500,000 damages to the United States in connection with the Nanking disorders of 1927, when an American educator, Dr. J. E. Williams, was killed. A Chinese-American commission today was understood to be nearing an agreement on the settlement.

The British claims, over which negotiations have not yet begun, are reported to total $5,000,000.

MUSSOLINI FETES VENIZELOS AFTER TREATY IS SIGNED

Rome, September 23.—(AP)—Premier Venizelos, of Greece, and Premier Mussolini signed the treaty of friendship, conciliation and arbitration between Greece and Italy at Chigi palace this morning. The two statesmen discussed the Mediterranean situation.

Mussolini gave a banquet in honor of the Greek statesman. Members of the cabinet, parliament leaders and state officials attended.

Mussolini said that both Greece and Italy had been a source of culture and civilization and added that the Italian government has always a clear view of the important factor of Greece in eastern Europe. This view he affirmed with the profound conviction that an intimate and sincere cooperation between the two states would lead to similar intimate collaboration between both peoples.

"This is the spirit which has animated us in concluding the treaty which we have signed," he said, "and that doubtless will be welcomed most favorably by all those who have an interest in the maintenance of peace and the development of the most fruitful relations with the states of the eastern Mediterranean."

ACCIDENTAL SHOT KILLS YOUNG GIRL ON HUNTING TRIP

Holmes, N. H., September 23.—(AP)—Mary Walker, 15-year-old daughter of L. W. Walker, of New York, Stock Exchange, was killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun as she was stepping from a boat on Squam Lake.

The girl had been duck hunting with a companion. As she stepped ashore her shotgun caught on the side of the boat and was discharged. The entire charge of shot entering her head. She lived for half an hour after the accident.

REV. B. C. GOODPASTURE OPENS REVIVAL SERIES

The Rev. B. C. Goodpasture, pastor of the Seminary Avenue Church of Christ, Sunday launched a series of evangelistic meetings which he will conduct at 7:30 o'clock each night this week, with the exception of Saturday.

Two new members were added to the church at the Sunday morning service, when he spoke on "The Ideal Conditions for a Meeting." At the evening service his topic was "The Lord's Treasure in an Earthen Vessel." Music for both services was under the direction of Dr. C. H. Paine.

Porto Rico Begins Task of Rebuilding Its Cities

Although in dire need of outside help to make itself presentable again, San Juan has begun digging out from the wreckage and desolation left in the wake of the terrific hurricane which ravaged the island of Porto Rico. Above, the wreckage of a street in San Juan, where workers already have begun the task of cleaning away the debris.

Lovers, Who Slew Husband, Quarrel, Wife Is Betrayed

WOMAN PLOTS TO KILL MAN.

Rybnik, Upper Silesia, September 23.—(United News).—A murder, which in its motives and consequences resembled the most gruesome crimes of fiction, has been revealed by the confession of a woman and her lover after five days of questioning by police.

Both admitted today that they had killed the woman's husband to "get him out of the way" and their nearly perfect crime was discovered only because the murderess suspected her lover of "talking" and planned to kill him.

Josef Pocheziel and Mrs. Brachmann, the two principals in this story of illicit love and crime, are awaiting trial here.

Similar in some ways to a notorious American murder case, the man was first to confess and Mrs. Brachmann admitted complicity only when there was no escape, intermingling her confession with bitter words of condemnation for the weakness of her lover and partner in crime.

Men Were Neighbors.

Brachmann and Pocheziel were neighbors. Both were married but Pocheziel's wife was slowly dying of tuberculosis. While she was still alive Mrs. Brachmann started a love affair with Pocheziel. She made plans then to remove her husband from the scene, police said.

U. S. COAST GUARD RUINS RUM RUNNING FROM CANADA

Toronto, Ontario, September 23.—A dispatch from Port Colborne to the Toronto Globe today says that owing to the close watch being kept on the coast by United States coast guard boats, rum running is now becoming a losing game.

Many exporters are quitting in despair and seeking positions with industrial firms, operators who have been exporting several carloads per week now consider themselves fortunate if they run one carload in two weeks. The ostentation which characterized the activities of rum runners a year ago is no longer in evidence. The quietness and stealth of the present procedure is the direct opposite to the flaunting of a year ago.

In addition to the increased vigilance of the United States coast guard boats, the decrease of exportation may be partially accounted for by the fact that the Canadian government has passed a law whereby the liquor must be unloaded from the cars in which it reached the exporters within 24 hours of the time it left the brewers.

SUBMARINE FLOATS AFTER FOULING SHOAL

New London, Conn., September 23.—(AP)—The submarine S-17 which went aground at Juan Point in Almirante Bay, 90 miles from Coco Solo, Panama Canal zone, was floated and proceeded to her base at Coco Solo apparently undamaged, according to a message to Rear Admiral H. Brumby, commander of the control force at the submarine base here.

The submersible was hauled clear of the shoal by the sweeper Bagaduce and the ocean going tug Swan at high water while the submarines S-14 and S-15, sister ships, stood by.

AL CAPONE DENIES HE SHOT HIMSELF

Chicago, September 23.—(AP)—Reports that "Scarface Al" Capone, notorious Chicago gangster, who takes elaborate precautions to see that he is not shot by others, had accidentally shot himself were unverified because those who came in contact with the wounded man were not acquainted with the features of the gangster.

Capone, grinning policemen said, started out to play golf last week and when clambering into an automobile accidentally discharged a pistol he carried in his hip pocket, inflicting flesh wounds in both legs.

At a Hammond hospital officials said that a man suffering from pistol wounds in his legs was brought to the hospital Sunday for treatment and was discharged last night. The man, hospital attendants said, was accompanied by two burly companions who remained with him while there, but gave the name of Robert Geary.

Dr. B. W. Chidlaw, of Hammond, who treated the wounded man, said he told him he had shot himself accidentally. Dr. Chidlaw said he did not know Capone and had never seen his pictures, but described a scar on the wounded man's face similar to that carried by Capone and which gives him his sobriquet, and said his weight and height were about the same as those of the gangster.

A reporter said he had found Capone in a hotel last night and Capone denied having shot himself and did a dance to prove it, but hospital authorities said the man they knew as Geary had left that institution last night in time to reach Chicago, although they doubted if he would care to dance.

HOWARD ASKS PROBE OF UPSTAW CHARGES

Asking that William D. Upshaw, recently defeated in a race for congress, be called before the grand jury of Fulton and DeKalb counties to substantiate statements alleging that his opponent, Congressman Leslie J. Steele, was re-elected by "Tammany, anti-Upshaw money," William Schley Howard, chairman of the democratic congressional committee from the fifth district, has addressed letters to Solicitors John A. Boykin, of Fulton, and Claude C. Smith, of Stone Mountain County.

Mr. Howard also asks the grand jury to "investigate the source of large sums of money expended in the Upshaw campaign." The Fulton grand jury meets Tuesday and the DeKalb jury will be in session the first Monday in October.

With an expense fund in the recent election of only $866.63, Congressman Steele's expenditures represented the minimum of any candidate for congress in the fifth district for the last 25 years, Mr. Howard said. Following is the letter to Solicitor Boykin, a copy of which was sent to Solicitor Smith.

"Hon. Claude C. Smith,
Solicitor-General, Stone Mountain County, Ga.
"My dear Major Smith:
"As solicitor-general of the Stone Mountain judicial circuit, I desire to call your attention to a statement contained in The Atlanta Journal of the 19th instant quoting William D. Upshaw, late candidate for congress from the fifth congressional district, as follows:

"Of course Mr. Steele did not spend any money himself and in his own virgin innocence knew nothing about it, but I was furnished with cumulative evidence that Tammany, anti-Upshaw money flowed like water and some districts which were three to one for me were changed over night after certain key men were 'fixed' with Al Smith coin."

"As chairman of the democratic congressional committee from this district I desire to ask you in your official capacity to have William D. Upshaw summoned before the grand jury at its next meeting to disclose under oath any evidence that he may have substantiated such claims as he has made and that the grand jury be requested by you if any such evidence is produced to return proper bills of indictment against those who are guilty of any such charges.

"May I ask that when Mr. Upshaw appears before the grand jury that you also investigate the source of the large sums of money expended in his campaign.

"I am calling your attention to this matter for fear it may have escaped your notice and that you may act in this matter for the best interests of pure election in Georgia.

"Thanking you for your action in this matter, I am,
"Very truly yours,
"WILLIAM SCHLEY HOWARD."

Tricycle Stolen.

Parents, neighbors and passers-by were enlisted in a hastily organized "posse" which Sunday afternoon pursued a negro who had made off with a high-priced tricycle belonging to the young son of R. L. Broom, of 544 East Avenue, N. E. The man-rider seized the child's plaything and eluded the pursuit of several adults by dodging into some woods near the home. Anyone sighting the machine is earnestly requested to advise the parents so that the child's life may be brightened again.

Aimee "Prays" for Paris After Visit To Montmartre

BY RALPH HEINZEN,
United News Staff Correspondent.
Copyright, 1924, by The United News.
Paris, September 23.—Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist from Los Angeles, Calif., has spent a night on the Montmartre of Paris.

She had trod upon champagne corks; blinked at the almost naked dancing girls; been importuned by gigolos; and shivered aside the cold champagne to the wonderment of non-understanding waiters.

May Hold Revival.
She has walked in the deepest-dyed sin of Paris, and has come from it with a prayer that Paris may yet be saved and a fervent wish that she might, through a revival, help in its saving.

A week ago she arrived here from the United States on her first visit to Europe. Before leaving for Geneva where she will seek rest and peace, she accompanied a United Press correspondent on a tour of the Montmartre—her first visit to that famed spot where Americans, French and Europeans, gather nightly to engage in revels.

While she looked on with sorrow, the Montmartre and its people paid little attention to her. To the waiters, the dancers, the entertainers and all the others who manufacture the revelry, she was no more than any other American tourist.

Wherever she went jazz bands were blaring just as they blare in New York, or Chicago, San Francisco, or Los Angeles. Prices were quoted to her escort in American dollars and not in French francs.

Gigolos, the professional dancers whose business it is to dance with women visitors, approached her speaking in perfect English.

But Mrs. McPherson would have none of it.
"I cannot help but think," she said, "what a perfect place for a revival this Abbaye de Thelème would make."

That comment, made as she surveyed one of the famous spots in the gay district, was typical of her attitude.

Visits "Heaven And Hell."
The tour covered the hill from the bottom, far up towards the top.

It began at the "Dead Rat" where waiters came rushing up, placing tubs of iced champagne before Mrs. McPherson. They seemed puzzled when she would not partake.

"Heaven and Hell" was next visited, then "Piccadilly," Russian Caviar, and "Bricktops."

By that time Mrs. McPherson was more accustomed to her surroundings and when gigolos offered to dance with her she amazed them with a plea that they desert such haunts and seek the greater pleasure of religion and the joy of living. They turned away, bewildered.

Wine-waiters at "Bricktops" also heard her plea. Mrs. McPherson's eyes sparkled and she took real delight in her effort to convert them.

Sees Wicked Cabarets.
Throughout the evening she was frankly curious, but when at midnight nude girls rode their chariots through the whirling crowd at Tabarin, she shuddered.

"What a pity; what a pity," she exclaimed—the only person in the throng who was not cheering gaily. Josephine, once owned by Josephine Baker, former darling of New York's Harlem, proved highly interesting.

The tour ended at "Forest Glade," where a strong, masculine atmosphere predominates in decoration, entertainment and in service.

"My heart almost stopped when I saw girls, unclad, or nearly so, dancing, singing or riding their chariots, all for such pleasure of the flesh," she said as she returned to her hotel. She refused to leave the beaten path.

and visit the haunts where the Apaches, drug users and drug sellers and their women companions live outside the law.

She was deeply touched by the sight of thousands of young girls and boys, scarcely in their twenties, who had run away from their homes in many parts of France, attracted by the bright lights.

But she refrained from extended preaching until she returned to her hotel, and then she wrote her impressions and handed her notes to the correspondent. He read as follows:

BY AIMEE SEMPLE MCPHERSON
(Written for The United News.)
I stood on the brink of hell tonight and looked down inside.
Gay Paris is polished on the outside, but it is the rottenest city in the world at the core.

I want to cry from the highest point in Montmartre:
"This city is a veritable Sodom and Gomorrah, but it seems to me that God's patience is being tested and Paris is doomed to certain destruction."

Your revelry will burst like the bubbles in your champagne glasses; like your toy balloons you burst with cigarette tips overhead.
"Satan has blinded you."
"You are sex mad."
"You have forgotten civilization."

Reverted to Animals.
"You have reverted to animals but I know you are hungry for religion and some day I will come back and try to save a few souls."

I suffered to see those young girls whose lips quivered under carnal, I thought of the unhappiness of their mothers as I saw them stretch their bare arms to their dancing partners, who whirled their hard-boiled bodies in the mad dancing, but I was disgusted with the gorgeously gowned matrons, stalking through the salons, trying to cover their sinful hearts with a thin layer of silk.

It hurts me to think of the thousands of young Americans who come here imagining they are on a lark; without chaperones.

"If only their parents knew that the Montmartre is wilder and dirtier than the inn-sold dance halls of the old wild west."

Regular Roman Orgies.
What an atmosphere; what pitfalls. Everywhere the popping of corks; girls and boys on high chairs bent over bars or girls with babylike faces letting strangers encircle their waists on the dance floor.

These orgies are worse than Rome. They last from sunset to dawn. They make me ask where is France's reason? Where are her churches? I had almost to disbelieve that some day there will be a reckoning and they will pay for every vile kiss which has crushed the lips of callous companions.

Paris is like a white sepulchre, a burial place of thousands of rotted souls.

I would love to hold a revival here and clean out the shadows and pull the spiders from the webs where jazz is driving people crazy.

The more I see of Paris and the Montmartre, the more happier I am to be an American.

At home, at least, we never liberate such commercialized devilry.

MOUNTAIN LEADER
VICTIM OF SHOT

Pineville, Ky., September 23.—(AP) Bill Henderson, mountain leader, who gave his land in the rugged section of Bell county that a settlement school bearing his name might be established, was shot from ambush today and little hope is held for his recovery, according to word received from the school 20 miles from here.

Several years ago Henderson, thought to be dying, promised to reform from a life of lawlessness and gave his small farm to the Rev. Hiram Frakes for a school in which his children might have an education. The school was established and fifteen indentments against him were filed away when the Rev. Frakes agreed to see that he would go straight.

BEER JOINT RAIDS
FILL CHICAGO JAILS

Chicago, September 23.—(United News.)—Wholesale raids on beer flats and gambling houses on the north and west sides of Chicago early Sunday filled district police stations with more than 200 prisoners, many of whom were booked as "inmates."

Included in the raids was the Halstead street district where six proprietors and more than 50 inmates were arrested. This district is commanded by Captain Luke Garrick, whose raiding activities was said to have been responsible for the bombing of the police head's home.

Garrick's wife and other members of the family who were in the home were endangered by the bomb which wrecked the front of the building.

Garrick announced following the bombing that "these tactics would create no fear and that the raids were to be continued with renewed vigor."

The most sensational raid was made today at the gambling house said by police to be under the management of John "Red" Bolton, west side beer magnate. Four carloads of police, denied admittance, battered down the doors and arrested scores of persons as inmates.

John Kratz was said by police to be the proprietor. Bolton was not found.

While the raid was under way, however, outlooks slashed the tires of the police cars.

TWO ARE KILLED,
TWO ARE JAILED
IN AUTO WRECK

Gastonia, N. C., September 23.—(AP) Luther Pressley and Allen Gaunt, of Liberty, S. C., are dead and Jack Sanders and Luther Morgan, of Clover, S. C., are held in the Gaston county jail without bond as the result of an automobile accident 10 miles south of this city this afternoon. Both Sanders and Morgan were only injured slightly.

A coroner's investigation disclosed that Sanders was driving the car at the time of the accident while Morgan was on the front seat beside him. The automobile was wrecked when it plunged off the roadway and turned over one or more times.

All four are between 20 and 25 years of age and are said to be employed in textile plants. The bodies of Pressley and Gaunt were being taken to Liberty tonight.

BAINBRIDGE LADIES
SEE SHERIFF POUR
OUT BOOTLEG RUM

Bainbridge, Ga., September 23.—Sheriff W. J. Catledge poured out approximately 100 gallons of bootleg stuff in his office Saturday before an invited committee of ladies from the Bainbridge W. C. T. U. The sheriff in a brief talk said that rumor of his getting a revenue cut capred while he was in the office of the sheriff of the county was absolutely false, that he himself was not a teetotaler but that his office did observe the law.

Mrs. J. M. Scott, president of the second district W. C. T. U. organization, in a short talk stated that the ladies believed Mr. Catledge, trusted him and would aid him in any way in enforcement of the law, and that it was a conceded fact that Sheriff Catledge was an honorable officer.

MODERN HOSPITAL
WILL BE ERECTED AT MILLEDGEVILLE

Milledgeville, Ga., September 23.—A modern hospital will be begun in Milledgeville within the next thirty days, according to announcements made here by Dr. Richard Binion. A lot on the corner of Wall and Jefferson streets was purchased by local doctors Tuesday as the site for the building.

Barnesville U. D. C.
Observes Memorial
For Miss Rutherford

Barnesville, September 23.—A memorial service for Miss Mildred Rutherford was observed here at the regular meeting of the U. D. C. The meeting was in charge of Mrs. Emma Langford, first vice president, in the absence of the president, Mrs. C. H. Willis. The program was in charge of Mrs. J. W. Reeves, assisted by Mrs. Lillie Mitchell. Beautiful tributes were paid to Miss Rutherford, and appreciation was shown for the untiring work she accomplished as historian for the U. D. C. She was characterized as the south's greatest woman lecturer, and author, and as a champion of the south's cause she was unexcelled.

Miss Ogletree Dies
At Home in Griffin;
Will Be Buried Today

Griffin, Ga., September 23.—(Special.)—Miss Margaret Ogletree, one of the most popular young women of this city, died suddenly at her home here Saturday night. She had been ill only a day when death occurred.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Monday morning at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Morris Smith and the Rev. Malcolm Williamson officiating. Besides her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Ogletree, she is survived by one brother, R. S. Ogletree, and four sisters, Mrs. W. M. Weldon, Mrs. A. Q. Taylor, Mrs. C. C. Bond and Mrs. Robert Childs.

COMMUNIST LEADER IS SPEAKER IN CITY

Admitting that he did not expect to be elected governor of New Jersey, although he is a candidate for that office on the worker-communist ticket, Scott Nearing, noted economist, in a speech Sunday night at the Central Congregational church said his party was utilizing the campaign as a means of spreading propaganda against the "capitalist system."

The communist denounced the speech of Hoover, made recently in Newark, on labor policies, denying that the army of unemployed had been reabsorbed into industry. He said there are now 4,000,000 jobless worth a result of "prosperity."

The communists are now on the ballot in 24 states and expect to be on in about 35 before election day, Mr. Nearing said.

NUMBER PROBLEMS TO SOLVE! NO LETTER TO WRITE!
NEATNESS DOESN'T COUNT.

Notice the official lists of prizes printed in the center of this double page.

Note that instead of only 1 list that there are THREE SEPARATE LISTS OF PRIZES. You can compete in any one of these lists or you can compete in ALL THREE LISTS. You can win one prize out of each list—three prizes out of the entire contest.

Note that each list has a different subscription requirement. For instance, LIST NO. 1 requires 3 subscriptions; LIST NO. 2 requires 2 subscriptions; and LIST NO. 3 requires only 1 subscription.

If your new subscribers live in Atlanta or suburbs or in any city or town where The Atlanta Constitution maintains dealer or carrier delivery YOU DO NOT HAVE TO SEND IN ANY MONEY WITH YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS. Only in case the paper must be delivered by mail is it necessary that you enclose payment for each subscription when you send in that subscription.

In view of the fact that ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS MUST BE ACCEPTABLE TO AND MUST BE VERIFIED BY THE CONSTITUTION, it is suggested that you submit your subscriptions IMMEDIATELY in order that The Constitution may be able to promptly inform you whether or not your subscriptions are satisfactory, and whether or not you are duly qualified for a prize.

By submitting your subscriptions at once you will have time to replace any unsatisfactory subscription in time to qualify yourself for a prize.

If you want all 30 cartoons note the request blank printed in the lower right-hand corner of this page.

If anything about this contest is not perfectly clear to you, telephone The Constitution's MOVIE TEST EDITOR (Walnut 6565) for a complete and courteous explanation.

This is exactly what you have to do to win one or all three of the automobiles shown above—or any three of $8,000.00 worth of prizes listed in The Atlanta Constitution's great contest:

(a)—Name the title of the movie represented by each of 30 cartoons.

(b)—Send in either 1, or 2, or 3 new six-months subscriptions to The Atlanta Constitution.

The first 7 of these 30 cartoons are printed along the bottom of this double page. Note that under each cartoon there is a list of titles, and in this list can be found the correct title of the cartoon printed above that list.

After you turn in your subscription or subscriptions that qualify you for any one, or all three of the prize lists, THERE ARE NO MORE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR YOU TO SECURE.

You can win the Essex $919 coach with one subscription; you can win the Essex $978 Sedan with two subscriptions; and you can win the Hudson $1,557 Sedan with three subscriptions. YOU DO NOT NEED ANY MORE SUBSCRIPTIONS THAN THOSE NAMED ABOVE.

There is no reward for additional subscriptions. You are not competing with ANYBODY as to the number of subscriptions you turn in. The correctness of the answers is THE SOLE DECIDING FACTOR IN THE AWARDED OF PRIZES.

The 7 cartoons you see printed along the bottom of this page are of average difficulty. Some of the remaining 30 are harder—some are easier. IF YOU CAN CORRECTLY NAME THE ANSWERS TO THE FIRST SEVEN CARTOONS, THERE IS NO REASON WHY YOU SHOULD NOT BE A WINNER IN THIS CONTEST.

If you would like to get all 30 cartoons together with the blanks for your new subscribers to sign, notice the request form printed in the lower right-hand corner of this page.

PARTY FACES A CRISIS.

In an address of great force and logic delivered at Monroe, Senator Walter F. George pointed to the "supreme crisis" that will confront the national democratic party in the event that Mr. Hoover is elected president through support from southern states brought about by party defection. He said:

"This statement is not inspired by Tammany; this statement is not a threat coming out of the east, it represents my deliberate judgment and it is the inexorable logic of the situation. The party cannot live as a national party if democratic votes in this campaign encompass the defeat of the party's nominees and insure the election of the republican candidates."

It is true, and what does it mean?

It means that the party of our fathers, which saved the Anglo-Saxon white civilization of the south from the party that sought to destroy it, will be surrendered, lock, stock and barrel, to that same party under the executive control of a man who brazenly and notoriously abrogated racial segregation in the department of commerce.

That statement has been denied but not by Mr. Hoover. On the subject the records are as outstanding and unmistakable as a pot-luck and just as black.

It means that surrender will be made by mutineers in the party crew, by sticking a knife into the heart of the captain, chaining his mates, and taking charge of the ship for surrender to a designing "higher-up" for a division of the cargo.

It is a serious thought when a southern democrat analytically contemplates what the possible success of this insurrection movement will mean.

That the method and well devised plan for the democratic party's destruction from the inside should have originated in the south, upon which the republican party tried to fasten the Lodge "force bill," and is trying now to fasten the Dyer anti-lynch bill which is intended to penalize, by enormous fines and tribute exactions, hundreds of thousands of innocent white citizens of the south—one of the most bitter sectional measures known in the nation's history—is unthinkable and almost unbelievable.

The sires of the southern-born men and women who are leading in this movement to turn the democratic party over to the party that after the war stacked bayonets in the front yards of southern white homes, and brought about a reversion of negro political, legislative and police domination in Georgia and other southern states, would turn over in their graves if they knew their sons and daughters were engaged in such a nefarious undertaking.

That is not all. The destruction of the democratic party, by southern democratic bolters, would mean the passage of the Tinkham bill for radical reduction in the southern representation in congress. This would make of the south a "lost province" in national consideration.

It is time to think, and to think aloud!

It is within the memory of the present generation when four negroes were in congress from the south, when a large quota of negroes were in the state legislature, and when almost half of the post-offices were manned by negro officials.

The negro is a citizen, and correctly enjoys every privilege and service that the governments of the nation and the states afford.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Noble's Other Exploit.

Curious sidelights on the Italian expedition and the character of the dirigible's navigator, Noble, are contained in Captain Amundsen's story of the flight of the Norge, in which Noble, Amundsen, Riiser-Larsen were associated. Amundsen's account is published in Progress magazine. When Noble was seated behind the steering gear of an automobile he seemed to go into a trance, wrote Amundsen. On several occasions his passengers were so frightened by his disregard of all rules of safety, that they came to believe the man irresponsible the moment he was beginning to speed. In the Norge also, Noble had often a "faraway absent" look. "I often watched Noble as he negligently manoeuvred the ship, heading it straight for some ice-floe or suddenly pointing the ship upwards without taking into account gas pressure. It is an amazing account wherein Amundsen tells of the great disorder and confusion that reigned around the expedition, which coincided with rumors that were current on the Italian expedition. At some moments," writes Amundsen, "Noble was afraid and he asked Ellsworth and myself to give him our word that in the event of having to come down on the ice the Norwegian would not desert the Italians. That the man who tried to diminish our efforts and those of Ellsworth in the eyes of the world should have thought it necessary to ask our word under such circumstances, well that describes him in one stroke."

The surrender of the democratic party to the republican party, through the instrumentality of democratic insurrectionists, would mean more than an endorsement of the orgy of corruption in high offices, as has marked the republican administration since 1921. It would mean a red flag of defiance against the arresting of such corruption, for the democratic party, without a stain to blench its record, has been, and is, the only check valve.

The uncovering of the unprecedented record of scandal in and out of Washington since the close of the Wilson regime was by democratic senators. Republican senators, allied with the administration, tried to block the investigations, and obstruct justice. In a partial way they succeeded anyway. Albert B. Fall has never been penalized for one of the most outrageous crimes and betrayals in national history.

Senator George is right. And the people of the south should pause and ponder, and then with militant strike the blow that shall say "this thing shall not be done."

GOING BACK TO COTTONS.

Tremendous progress is being made in increasing the consumption of stylish cotton dress goods.

The Cotton Textile Institute, of New York, which began Walker D. Hines, is president, began an intensive campaign to this end three years ago. At the time cotton fabrics were practically in the discard as relating to women's wearing materials. Every garment was silk, particularly in the high-styled field. As a consequence cotton consumption was enormously reduced, while the consumers were taxed unnecessarily for high-priced ready-made silk garments and materials merely because fashion so decreed.

The situation affected the producer most as prices of raw cotton reflected the fall-off in consumptive demand. It also affected the mill interests. In both of these particular Georgia, and every other cotton producing and manufacturing state, felt the reaction.

The Textile Institute, with a staff of scientists to find new uses for cotton, and a staff of publicity experts, undertook two major objectives, both looking to an increase in cotton consumption. It was a wise and far-seeing movement, for a large number of new uses for the staple have been developed, and the department stores and drygoods stores of the country have become so enthused over the campaign that they are now pushing cotton fabrics, and the leading stylists of the fashion centers are making them up into the most attractive garments that could possibly be worn.

This year will show a phenomenal increase in the use of wearing fabrics, and from a survey just completed by the institute the year 1929 will show a marked increase over this year. The most significant feature of this new tendency towards cottons started at the very top of the style ladder.

The official report of the survey just released says:

In answer to the question as to whether cotton has returned to fashion importance, 15 stylists and fashion authorities replied in the affirmative. Piques, prints, voiles, dimities, velveteens, percales, ginghams, organdies, batistes, lawns and broadcloths were mentioned as the most popular cotton fabrics last season.

"While some of our reports reveal a disinclination to prophesy anything in so capricious a field as fashion in general, there is a confident feeling that 1929 will be a big cotton year."

"This forecast has come to us in different forms and varying degrees of positiveness; and it is generally based upon the premise that cotton has made a success in a high-styled field, and that the natural thing to expect would be volume selling in the middle-price ranges."

Much progress has yet to be made before women generally are educated to discard imported silks for domestic cottons, but style, beauty, health, comfort, all contribute to the present tendency, and the women of America should take a common sense view of it for their own good appearances, as well as for the savings that a more general use of cottons will assure.

The Cotton Textile Institute is doing a splendid work, and if the consumers will cooperate, as they should, the south will have millions of dollars added annually to its production wealth.

We know of a sweet young thing who attended the radio show to learn something about wave lengths before going to the hair dresser.

Just in Passing

BY JAMES A. HOLLOWAY.

"What do you think of the situation?"

Scarcely a letter reaches my desk that does not contain an inquiry in the above words, or in words meaning the same.

They refer to the national campaign.

Well, many an election forecast, based on sound reasoning, has been turned up side down during the last week of the campaign.

At the present time the Smith tide is "coming in," and the wind is fair. The New York governor is gaining faster than any candidate for president, during the first ten days of his campaign, in the history of partisan politics in America.

One correspondent inquires, "Is Hoover a 'wet' or a 'dry'?" Both! He tries to blow hot and cold at the same time.

He puts the "noble experiment" affectionately on the back, but has said that he will, if elected, refer the whole prohibition problem to a fact-finding commission to report back some time in the distant future. Which means—

That the present intolerable enforcement force, the present orgy of bootlegging and corruption, the present flood tide of booze, the present wave of crime, the present carnival of death and disease and mental infirmity from drinking poison, will continue indefinitely, without any change for the better, or tightening up on enforcement.

My! The "American Union of Bootleggers for Mutual Advancement and Protection" will cut up high jinks in its riots of revelry on the night of November 6 if Hoover should be elected.

All the bootleggers are "dry," and are for Hoover.

Get some of these "dry" leaders, who are tearing their hair today as "anti-Smith democrats" to poll their personal bootleggers, and see if this is not so!

Here is another question— "Did Tammany help in the defeat of the force bill? The Hooverites emphatically say "no!"

The Congressional Record shows that on July 2, 1890, the notorious Lodge force bill passed the house by a vote of 155 to 145, "amid loud applause on the republican side," and eleven New York and Tammany congressmen, several of them Catholics, voted with the south against this manifestation of spleen and revenge.

And another— "Did Tammany have anything to do with the defense of Jefferson Davis?" When Jefferson Davis languished in a federal prison it was Tammany Hall that came to his rescue, secured bond for him, employed an eminent attorney—the great criminal lawyer, Judge O'Connor—to defend him, and later secured his release.

And another— "Has Governor Smith during his administration secured any taxation reforms?"

While procuring many fundamental reforms in the administration of the state government, which will permanently decrease government expense and, as a result, taxation; and while advocating the use of public credit for the development of revenue-producing public improvements, he advocated and suc-

Odd Ways the World Gets Its Water

Windmill water pumps, long characteristic landmarks of Holland, are giving away to electric power plants. "This evolution," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society, "suggests many odd ways in which the world pumps its water supply."

Szechwan Water Lifts Like Ferris Wheels.

"While American farmers on hither-to arid areas of the west are having their water delivered to them for irrigation purposes, Chinese farmers, known as the Szechwan water lifters, from one to four crops a year on their less-than-acre plots, are still using devices which antedate the windmill by many centuries.

The Chengtu plains of Szechwan province are dotted with huge water wheels which resemble the ferris wheels at state fairs. Upon each of these wheels is a large wooden bucket, which, as the wheel turns, dips into the river and carries water to the fields. The buckets are connected by a long chain of wooden links, and the wheels are driven by a single axle passing through the center of each wheel.

Water Wheels Still in Use in U. S.

"The Persian water wheel resembles wheels used in our northwestern states, and the early part of this century. On the sites of several water irrigation projects water wheels, similar to paddle wheels on Ohio river boats, were used for irrigation purposes. In remote districts, some of the old wheels are still in operation.

"Among the Indians of the west, the tribal womenfolk still carry water jars on their heads in much the same manner as the natives of central Africa.

"Have Distant Water Sources.

"The American Indian needed no pumps for his moved where there was abundant water supply. Civilization, however, makes it necessary to move so many miles of water to the place where it is needed.

"The Queen Mary reservoir at Littleton, England, which supplies London, is a masterpiece of engineering. It is a reservoir with a capacity of about 7,000,000 gallons. The Elephant Butte irrigation dam on the Rio Grande river, although not entirely artificial, holds more than a hundred times as much. There are several dams in the United States

'Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread'

ceeded in accomplishing a 25 per cent reduction in the state income tax applicable to 1928 incomes. This gave immediate relief of $8,250,000 to the income taxpayers of the state.

As the legislative session of 1924 closed, through good management and economical administration it was found that it would be possible to reduce, not only the income tax, but also the direct tax on real estate and personality.

Reduction in this tax gave relief to real estate owners and to those other classes of taxpayers who pay personal and indirect taxes affected by the rates on real estate.

Governor Smith proposed and secured a reduction of 25 per cent on the direct tax, which caused a saving to taxpayers of $8,650,000 for that year. Together with the savings on income tax, the taxpayers of the state were saved very nearly $17,000,000 in each of three years, 1924, 1925 and 1926, a total of $51,000,000. In 1928 he secured a reduction in direct taxes of 1-2 of a mill, resulting in a saving of $12,500,000 to farmers and landowners. Altogether he saved the taxpayers of New York state $63,500,000.

New York state was thus enabled to take the lead of all the states and even of the federal government, in tax reduction.

Governor Hardman is seeking a reorganization of state departments. Couldn't he find an example worth emulating in Governor Smith's administration?

This correspondent sounds like a Smith man.

Yes! The machinery of the state government, which was conducted through 187 boards, commissions, bureaus and departments, was simplified into 19 major state departments, combining under each for budgetary and administrative control, all departments having similar functions. He also secured a short ballot, by which only the executive officers of the state, the governor, lieutenant-governor, the comptroller and the attorney general are elected, and the other officers appointed as part of the governor's cabinet.

He took these matters direct to the people in advocating the required constitutional amendments—and won a tremendous victory, and an enormous saving to the state in money and efficiency. He forced a referendum in the face of a hostile republican legislature.

There are a number of other questions in my mail, and as time permits, I will try to answer them.

Houghton Mifflin company have broken all records for speed in the publication of Franklin D. Roosevelt's "The Happy Warrior." Alfred E. Smith. Received at 11:30 on Tuesday, the manuscript was read by the editorial department and examined by the advertising and publicity departments. Copy was prepared and received by the Riverside Press for manufacture at 2 o'clock. The book had been set, proof-read and plated by 5 o'clock on Wednesday and was printed on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Round copies were ready at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Some speed! But it shows you how the old line democrats are doing the marathon this year.

HABITS, HOBBIES AND
No. 3—Drinking Water With Something in It.

The folks at camp flatly decline to drink the perfectly pure water from the well because they say they taste sulphur or something in it. On the other hand they buy by the case that awful concoction known as pop, rose beer or whatever the storekeeper has in stock, and drink the stuff with manifestations of pleasure. If there were a third hand I might add that water, which I swear had a more palatable flavor than the aforesaid bottled liquids.

Many valetudinarians like to drink from a half pint to a pint of water, first thing on rising in the morning, as a sort of internal bath. They believe this washes out the stomach.

So it does. But what of it? The water remains in the stomach a few minutes longer than nice cold water, but inside of half an hour, as a rule, it passes on into the intestine, where some of it may be absorbed into the blood. For feeble folk this practice of taking hot water on rising is all right, if they like it. For younger and more vigorous folk it is generally better to take it cold. But unfortunately a good many of these valetudinarians make a practice of salting their water, most of us get a little salt down the throat, and that is not good for the stomach.

So it does. But what of it? The water remains in the stomach a few minutes longer than nice cold water, but inside of half an hour, as a rule, it passes on into the intestine, where some of it may be absorbed into the blood. For feeble folk this practice of taking hot water on rising is all right, if they like it. For younger and more vigorous folk it is generally better to take it cold. But unfortunately a good many of these valetudinarians make a practice of salting their water, most of us get a little salt down the throat, and that is not good for the stomach.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Political Prophets Are Busy Guessing Victories for Smith and Hoover.

Washington, September 23.—(Special.)—The six states in which Governor Smith is speaking on his present tour are: New Hampshire, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, Washington, Oregon, California, West Virginia, Colorado.

Frank R. Kent, of the Baltimore Sun, is an unusually accurate estimator of political currents. Writing to the Sun from Chicago, he says: "It is difficult to see how Smith can be elected without the state of Minnesota. That is about what it gets down to when the electoral votes of all the states that can be ascribed to the democratic candidate without being unreasonable are added up."

A Guess at Combinations.

Thus far all figuring on what the states will do in November is merely guessing at combinations that will elect Smith or will elect Hoover.

No campaign manager at this stage of the game, is going to concede the election to the other party. Certainly not! He is going to keep the party moving and voters reeled-up with the most optimistic pictures he can make of a grand and triumphant finale. He would be a plumb political idiot to do less.

For nobody can know now just what this capricious and emotional American electorate will do on the 6th of November.

Time and again they have fooled the wisest political calculators in both parties. They are right now milling around in nearly half the states with no certainty of the party camp into which the majority will finally head.

Past performances seem wholly unrepresentative of the chaotic conditions are the most unusual and the issues the most confused of any campaign that living men can recall.

An Illuminating Table.

For instance, one of the most expert election analysts in the country, who has forecast almost perfectly the results of every presidential election from 1908 to date, sends me a copy of his table of the states as he thinks they will vote, if called to the polls tomorrow.

I transcribe it as follows:

Democratic.

Massachusetts 18
Rhode Island 5
Connecticut 7
New York 45
New Jersey 14

This electoral analyst says he does not include Missouri (18) and Wisconsin (13) in either column, because the best advice reaching him from them indicates that they are the two most doubtful states in the union at this time.

If the above line-up should hold good to the end either Missouri or Wisconsin would swing the democratic ticket to a handsome victory, as either the above showing it would need only four votes to win; but should both those states go republican that ticket would have 269 votes, with 262 needed to elect.

Radical Changes May Occur.

From the advice that reach me, as either the above showing it would need only four votes to win; but should both those states go republican that ticket would have 269 votes, with 262 needed to elect.

FUND FOR POLICE BAND TRIP IS $1,000 SHORT

That the police band may go to the forthcoming convention of Spanish war veterans in Havana, scores of workers will swing into action early this morning to put the expense fund, being raised for the musicians, "over the top," by late afternoon today. At the last count Saturday approximately $5,000 of the $6,000 needed had been raised and it is hoped that by hard work the deficit may be made up when the ways and means committee meets at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The drive is being sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and a committee made up of city officials, policemen and civic leaders.

The band has received an invitation to attend the convention from the Cuban government and there is a two-fold purpose behind the desire of many citizens to see the group go to the gathering. Firstly, the advertising which will accrue to the city of Atlanta is expected to be of great value. Secondly, the work of the band, in providing music, stunts and general "pep" to the gathering, is expected to be of great aid in Atlanta's drive to bring a proposed $2,000,000 hospital to this city.

City To Welcome Douglas Oliver, Due Home Today

Douglas Oliver, Jr., hero of innumerable Boy Scouts, arrives at the Brookwood station at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, after an extended trip into the interior of Africa with the party of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson. The Atlanta scout will be greeted by Governor, mayor and a large committee of civic officials, as well as scout leaders and executives.

Arrangements have been made for young Oliver to make an appearance at the Erlanger theater with each showing of "Simba," a spectacular film of animal life obtained by the Johnsons on a former expedition to the dark continent. The film is booked for two weeks here.

ANNUAL FOREST FAIR PLANNED BY OFFICIALS

Waycross, Ga., September 23.—The Georgia Forestry fair will be held again next year and will be an annual institution, it is announced by B. M. Lufburrow, Georgia state forester.

The closing day of the 1928 forestry fair was devoted to a summary of the week's work, interesting talks on what was accomplished this year and the recommendations for 1929 were made by H. L. Baker, Florida state forester; Mr. Stanley, South Carolina state forester; Dr. J. L. Herty, of the chemical foundation; J. S. Elkins, secretary of the Waycross chamber of commerce, and others.

The business session had a large attendance and it was the unanimous opinion that the fine example set by the Georgia department of forestry will be followed by other states. Florida expects to hold a forestry fair in 1929.

It was the unanimous agreement that more attention should be paid outdoor demonstrations where the many visitors may have an opportunity to watch forestry in actual practice.

GERMAN POLITICAL OPPONENTS STAGE BATTLE IN STREET

Berlin, September 23.—(United News.)—German political opponents—members of the Steel Helmet and members of the Reichsbanner—engaged in a street battle which lasted several hours late today.

The rioting was subdued only after the regular officers on duty had been reinforced by reserves. Thirty persons were injured and several buildings demolished.

The clash occurred in Spandau, a suburb of Berlin, and grew from a minor disturbance over political issues to an uncontrolled riot. Several leaders of the fighting were arrested after police reserves had arrived and dispersed the mob.

The Steel Helmet organization includes supporters of the former imperialistic government and the Reichsbanner is a republican organization.

Smith and Joe Robinson, presidential and vice presidential candidates: Chairman, Grady Bell; vice chairman, E. T. Hines and A. B. Conner, in the Bainbridge district; W. A. Wheeler, secretary; treasurer, Militia district chairman are: T. M. Hines, Atapulgus; A. J. (Berry) Sellers, Belcher's; Tom R. Few, Bell's; J. T. Powell, Brinson; Walter S. Allen, Climax; W. H. Betts, Faceville; Percy Youmans, Fowles-town; Lamar Powell, Kendrick's; H. T. Williams, Parkers; Joe B. Lynam, Pine Hill; M. C. Johns, Recovery; Sam M. Davis, West Bainbridge.

RADIO MESSAGES AS COMPETITION TO WIRES ASKED

Washington, September 23.—(United News.)—Plans for a short-wave radio message service covering the entire nation as a supplement to present land lines will be laid before the federal radio commission Tuesday by representatives of the Universal Wireless Communication company.

Point-to-point message service between 125 "key" stations throughout the United States is planned by the company, which has applied for wavelengths to be used between all large cities in the country.

HELL NOMINATED AL, SAYS REV. STRATON

Dallas, Texas, September 23.—(AP) Charging that Governor Alfred E. Smith is "the nominee of the worst forces of hell," the Rev. John Roach Stratton, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church of New York, carried his attack on the democratic presidential nominee into Texas today.

Speaking from the grandstand at the state fair racetrack, where a few weeks ago Senator Joe Robinson, democratic vice presidential nominee, opened his campaign, Stratton defended ministers who make political speeches by saying that it was their moral duty to bring religion to politics.

"Morality is the only enduring foundation of the state," he continued, "and religion is the only creator and preserver of morality. Doubtless as a man, Smith would not do what his record shows him to have done, but as a public figure he has done so. He parades himself as being against the saloon when an interview in the New York Times of March 9, 1923, represents him as saying that he longed for the return of those times when a man could put his foot on the brass rail and blow foam from the tops of beer glasses."

After comparing the early life of Smith and Herbert Hoover, republican nominee, Stratton said that Hoover had "pressed the glass of milk and poured water to the lips of suffering humanity, and not the glass of wine with which to deluged them."

"Smith cannot be against vice or the saloon," he continued, "because he is the creature of Tammany Hall, which lives on the graft of protection from the underworld."

Repeal of the New York state prohibition law, Stratton concluded, "was an act against the federal constitution."

Cool Breezes And Rain Seen For Today

With probable rain in sight for Atlanta today, moderate winds, mostly north or northwest, will cool the city in the overcast showery weather. Continued cool will extend through today to Tuesday and perhaps the rest of the week.

Sunday was overcast and cool, with winds from the north and northwest creating a humid freshness that brought out topeaks for the second time this season. Temperatures Sunday ranged from a low mark of 62 degrees to a high reading of 66 degrees.

Atlanta Music Club To Offer Brilliant Series

MISS NANA TUCKER

Presaging one of the most brilliant series of the many sterling programs presented to music lovers of the city by the Atlanta Music club in announcement of the 1928-29 season made Saturday by Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the club. Two groups of presentations will extend from October 3 to May 1.

The series of programs will be presented in the morning musicales and the forum series. Each program to be offered this year is under the direction of well known and gifted lovers of music.

With the exception of two programs, all will be presented in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club. Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, the composer-pianist, will give a recital in the club auditorium and the organ recital by Miss Eda Bartholomew.

In view of the great artistic success of the series of programs presented, closing last spring, members of the club feel that they must exert every effort to make the forthcoming season an even more notable one, and to this end they have arranged what gives every promise of being one of the finest groups of musical offerings ever presented in the city.

"The board of the club feels that the attractions being offered the music lovers of Atlanta this season are most excellent," Mrs. Moore said Saturday. "The club is to be congratulated upon securing the chairman for the morning musicales and the forum series, and the splendid chairman and artists they, themselves, have secured for the programs."

The season will open October 3 with the first of the morning musicales series, being presented under the general chairmanship of Miss Nana Tucker. The ensemble program to be offered at this time will be under the direction of Mrs. Charles Edward Downman and will present Mrs. Downman, Mrs. Eleanor Whitmore King and Enrico Leide.

Mrs. Beach's recital. Next on the morning programs of the concert-music club series will be Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, noted composer-pianist, who, on October 6, will be heard in recital in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club. Mrs. Beach will be assisted by Miss Louise Barill, mezzo-soprano.

The forum series will open on October 17, with a Schubert memorial presented by Miss Ethel Beyer, chairman. Mrs. Delos Hill is chairman of the forum series.

Meetings will be called to order promptly at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and the program will begin exactly at 11 o'clock, it is announced.

Sale of tickets for subscribing members will open at 10 o'clock Monday morning, October 1, at Phillips and Crew piano company, Peachtree street, at 10 o'clock. Deposits of $5 on membership tickets may be sent now to 63 Eleventh street, N. E., checks made payable to the Atlanta Music club, and a number will be issued in order of checks received.

Program for Season. The entire programs for both the forum series and the morning musicales follow:

MORNING MUSICALES.
October 3—Ensemble program. Mrs. Charles Edward Downman, chairman; Mrs. Downman, Mrs. Eleanor Whitmore King and Mr. Enrico Leide.

TEMBLORS SHAKE IMPERIAL VALLEY

Calexico, Cal., September 23.—(AP) Three earthquake shocks, generally light, but one of which was heavy enough to cause many residents to leave their homes, were felt here and in other parts of Imperial valley this morning. No damage was reported.

The shakes occurred respectively at 8 o'clock, 9:43 and 9:46 a. m. The temblors were felt at El Centro, apparently in somewhat less degree.

Mrs. Jane Mattingly, chairman.
March 20—Russia. Mrs. Hal Davison, chairman.
April 17—Germany. Miss Hecht, chairman.
May 15—England and the Orient. Mrs. Chris Rauschenberg, Jr., chairman.

Snappy Fall Days

Require Good Meals

THESE fall days there's a tang in the air that peeps up the spirits and sharpens the appetite. Mother has to be ready with plenty of good things to eat—and most mothers find it a pleasure to cook when food is eaten heartily and the cooking praised.

That's the experience of the housewife who has learned to rely on ice to insure delicious and appetizing meals. The natural flavor is kept in food which has been properly protected with ice. There is a zest about it only freshness can give.

It doesn't pay to trust prime food to the vagaries of a fall day. Changes in temperature can ruin real flavor. Ice is the safeguard. It will more than repay you, in money actually saved, health protected and perfection of food-flavor retained.

An Extraordinary Event for All Atlanta

High's 46th Anniversary Sale!

Today---Monday---at nine o'clock marks the take-off of High's great 46th Anniversary Sale---the greatest storewide sale of its kind in all our 46 years of history! Together with our friends and customers, we celebrate 46 years of continuous growth for Atlanta and for J. M. High Company.

A great celebration with merchandise---a demonstration of the value-giving power of the High organization. And yet even more than that! It will be a very genuine demonstration of sincere appreciation to the people of Atlanta and the Southeast. Their unfailing loyalty makes it possible!

THE GREATEST EFFORT OF A GREAT STORE!

Experience Is a Dear Teacher

Goods bought too cheaply are really expensive from Service and Satisfaction standpoint. Experience always echoes an insistence on quality! People who experiment with cheap articles pay a costly price for the inevitable dissatisfaction in appearance and durability. One such experience elsewhere is sufficient to send them to High's, where quality and "Style" are the basis of every article of merchandise.

All possible resources and strength of the High organization have been geared up to make this celebration worthy of the event which it commemorates.

Months of intense, eager preparation have gone before. The most carefully laid plans—numberless trips to the far-flung markets—rejection of all but the most worthy merchandise! Every employee has shared in the plans—and every member of our "store family" is filled with enthusiasm over this great jubilee of values!

Our manufacturer friends have caught the same spirit! Result: Every promise of the most successful event in our history!

ATLANTA RUSHES AID TO STORM SUFFERERS

Atlanta continued their heavy contributions to the relief fund for the Florida hurricane sufferers over Sunday, according to figures from Red Cross headquarters Sunday night.

No definite figures were available on the total for the day but it was expected that the total for the drive would run well up toward $200,000 today. Sixty thousand dollars is the quota which has been assigned to Atlanta.

Advisers from the Salvation Army headquarters also indicated that contributions of clothing and supplies have been received in large quantities as well as cash subscriptions.

Aid is being extended to the suffering state from another angle, it was learned Sunday in advice from the National Association of Credit Men in New York, stating that the association is urging its members to extend all possible credit to business men in the stricken area.

Characterizing the situation as worse than that following the storm of 1926, officials of the credit men strongly recommended that the work of rehabilitation be hastened in all possible ways by the extension of credit.

Among substantial contributions to the fund Sunday was one made by the West End Baptist church. During the morning services, at the suggestion of I. N. Sheffield, chairman of the finance committee, a free will offering was taken and a total of $156.36 was collected.

A Salvation Army staff band concert at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church at 7:30 Tuesday morning has been arranged to swell the Army's Florida relief funds. It was announced Sunday by Colonel Walter Penock, band officer.

The concert was scheduled originally as a joint benefit for the band and the church missionary society but, on urgent appeals from Salvation Army relief workers in the storm area, it was decided to devote the band's entire share to the relief work. Mrs. Cliff Harris, Mrs. J. T. Glover, Mrs. Paul Taylor, Mrs. W. C. McDonald and Mrs. T. D. Gardner form a committee of the missionary society in charge.

200 MORE BODIES FOUND IN FLORIDA

to farmers in the area, and declared there was an immediate need for at least $300,000 for planting a crop for the winter season.

The losses in Broward county, which includes the extensive orange and sweet pepper sections of Pompano and Deerfield, are estimated at approximately $500,000. These losses, Mr. Harris points out, embrace the destruction of the farmers' homes in the towns of Florida, Pompano and Deerfield. The homes of white and negro tenant farmers on the plantations; farm animals, other equipment; about 2,000 acres of tomatoes already planted and seed beds for additional plantings of tomatoes and sweet peppers.

369 Farm Homes Lost.
In Palm Beach county, which embraces the Everglades section bordering and adjacent to the east and south shores of Lake Okechobee, the farm losses are not only much more disastrous, but involve a toll of lives that is still mounting.

Aside from the death toll in the lake region, the agricultural loss and needs in Palm Beach county may be epitomized as follows:

Total destruction of 360 white farmers' homes at an average value of $2,000 each, totaling $720,000.

Four hundred and ninety-five colored tenant homes, valued at $700 each, totaling $293,000.

Destruction of 100 white farmers' homes in east section valued at an average of $2,000 each, totaling $200,000.

Fifty negro farm homes at an average of $200 each, for total of $10,000.

Of 29 dairies in the region, 20 were destroyed at an average loss of $1,500 each, total $30,000.

Poultry Flocks Drowned.
Twenty commercial poultry flocks in the region embracing 5,000 adult birds valued at $2 each and equipment worth $12,000 for total of $22,000.

Add to these figures total losses of furniture, planting equipment, sheds, barns, fertilizer, hundreds of pounds of seed, etc., and it will be seen that the amount of $2,500,000 is conservative. It was pointed out.

This survey was evolved solely as a measure of expediency—to get construction action at the earliest possible moment, and in furthering the idea of C. Clinton Page, the Miami Herald's agricultural expert, accompanied Mr. Harris on the survey. Mr. Page stresses the belief that the figures presented in Mr. Harris' survey are ultra-conservative, and that the suggested needs are the minimum of actual necessity to carry on constructive rehabilitation in the area affected.

SEMINOLES ESCAPE BY COMING TO TOWN.

Miami, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—The wily subjects of Chief Tony Tommy, of the Seminoles, taking heed of the weather conditions which to them always indicate "big winds," trapped in from the Everglades to the security of a local Indian village two days before the tropical hurricane last Sunday and apparently escaped unscathed. More than fifty men, women and children of the tribe sought refuge from the Everglade lowlands, which were inundated when the waters of Lake Okechobee went out of their dikes, and huddled in the village.

One party of twelve hunters from the local village, however, caught by the high wind and waters, sought shelter in a cypress and escaped drowning only by inches when the water rose to their chests.

The only Seminole known to have been living in the vicinity of Lake Okechobee, Jack Tommy, brother of Chief Tony Tommy, has been accounted for, relief workers said. The majority of the tribe live in Dade, Collier and Broward counties.

STORM SUFFERERS OBSERVE BAPTIST SERVICE.

West Palm Beach, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—Hurricane-weary residents of West Palm Beach suspended relief operations long enough today to observe the Sabbath.

With 2,000 refugees of the wind-and-water-swept sections of Palm Beach county, they held short services in cafes, restaurants and what churches were left standing by last Sunday's hurricane.

In the wrecked and desolate towns of the Everglades, Salvation Army workers were in charge of services held in wrecked buildings at Belle Glade and Palokoke.

In other respects there was no cessation of reconstruction work on public utilities buildings and other necessary structures.

The homeless hundreds lined up for their meals served by Red Cross workers. The emergency clothing station remained open all day and hundreds were provided with articles of wearing apparel.

PALM BEACH COUNTY STARTS RECONSTRUCTION.

West Palm Beach, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—Palm Beach county, swept by one of Florida's most disastrous hurricanes a week ago, today looked to the future with plans for rapid rehabilitation, while rescue crews still worked across the debris and floods around Lake Okechobee searching for bodies of victims of the appalling tragedy.

Officials announced today that an accurate check of the dead probably would never be made, as the task apparently was impossible due to conditions arising in the stricken lake area.

Bodies In Bad Condition.

Bodies now being found are in such condition, they said, that many were being cremated while others were being buried near where they were found.

Reconstruction of buildings here and at Palm Beach, where the West Indian hurricane roared in off the Atlantic, after sweeping islands from Porto Rico to the Bahamas, ripped off roofs, smashed plate glass and otherwise created havoc, already has begun.

The ring of the hammer and screech of the saw continued throughout today as carpenters labored to restore the city to its normal condition. Work has progressed so rapidly that several places of business that have been closed during the past week can open tomorrow and many citizens have been able to return to their homes which have been made habitable again.

Plans for Rehabilitation.

Plans for rehabilitation of the lake section and along the east coast were being formulated by relief workers, who said as yet they were incomplete, but that the farmers' needs would receive first attention.

Those who lost their all, also will receive immediate attention, that will put them back "on their feet," they said. A number of farmers eager to return to their homesteads and begin the work of rehabilitation, have been furnished with tents and rations, Selma said, and others will receive similar aid.

Clothing has been furnished to 8,500 refugees by the Salvation Army in charge of the relief work. Three trucks loaded with supplies were sent to Palokoke and Belle Glade. While clothing has been received in substantial quantities, E. E. Vorenburg, secretary of the chamber of commerce, where such supplies are received, said that much more is needed to care for the situation.

Hurry Operations.

Relief workers hurried their operations throughout the lake region today despite the terrible handicaps of sand, mud, and debris. Trucks unloaded their burdens of supplies to waiting boats which bore the goods toward the stricken towns along the coast where thousands, who last Sunday were enjoying the comforts of homes, today were homeless and in immediate need.

Those returning from the area said that one could draw a line from Twenty-Mile Bend, on the highway from the city to Palokoke and then to Belle Glade, connect the sides of this triangle and gain an idea of the most tragic section.

Between the two lake communities of Palokoke and Belle Glade was one of the most thickly settled portions of the Everglades and here, relief workers said, was the heaviest toll of life. It was believed that some persons may yet be isolated in the backwood wilderness.

Reports received last night from the relief agencies at Clewiston minimized the possibility of an outbreak of influenza there where additional personnel and medical supplies had been rushed following receipt of messages stating that 20 to 40 cases of the disease had broken out among refugees. It was stated that the supplies had enabled the relief workers to have the situation well in hand and that only a few cases of disease were found.

Among the tragic chapters added to the story of stark devastation was that last night which related the fate of Belcher Bay, tiny sugar cane village on Lake Okechobee, where every inhabitant is believed to have perished. The Red Cross reported 200 bodies located across the bay from the village and expected that at least 150 additional were buried under debris. The normal population of the village is about 250 but many sugar cane field laborers were said to have recently gone there for employment. The village has not yet been entered and no one from there has reported since the storm.

FOOTBALL GAME TO RAISE FUNDS.

Jacksonville, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—The citizens' relief committee at a special meeting today accepted the offer of the University of Florida to play a varsity-football game here Saturday for the benefit of Florida hurricane sufferers.

A committee, under the direction of Ted Arnold, has inaugurated a drive for ticket sales. Aside from providing a fund for relief of the devastated areas, the game will give the people of Jacksonville their first opportunity to see the new "Gator" machine in action.

Tickets are to be sold for $1.00 each.

RADIO SET SAVES MANY LIVES.

Okechobee City, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—A fisherman's fortunate possession of a radio receiving set in his boat has added another bright episode to the story of radio in the recent tropical hurricane.

The receiving set is credited with having saved many lives, when Jack Hendry, in whose boat the set was carried, heard the hurricane warnings broadcast Sunday by the Miami radio station.

Hendry had two boats and a crew of 20 men on the lake at the time. He turned his vessel toward the nearest harbors on the western shore, spreading the alarm to other boats encountered on the way.

As a result of the warning only one fisherman, Tom Dykes, and his small son, are known to have lost their lives on the lake during the storm. Hendry's was destroyed in the storm, but most of the crews reached safety by clinging to boulders and debris.

It was said here today that a plea will be made to the government at Washington to establish a weather bureau and life guards on Lake Okechobee.

DR. D. A. POLING ATTACKS SMITH IN CHURCH TALK

New York, September 23.—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor and pastor of the Marble Collegiate church, told his congregation tonight that he believed Governor Smith's prohibition program, including the Canadian plan of liquor control, involved "nullification by evasion."

Asserting that "moral, constitutional and patriotic considerations left this national campaign out of partisan politics," Dr. Poling said that he believed the governor's program "many" he could not remain silent and "be true either to his own conscience or to the traditions of his pulp."

SALVATION ARMY HARVEST FESTIVAL OBSERVED HERE

Salvation Army harvest festival observance was opened at the West End citadel, 600 Lawton street, Sunday night with a sermon by Lieutenant Colonel Walter Penock, southern field secretary.

Services at West End tonight, at the Bellwood and Fulton village citadels next Saturday, Sunday and Monday and at the southern headquarters temple, 54 Ellis street, October 6 and 8, will feature locally the harvest festival which is being observed by Salvation Army workers throughout the United States.

SMITH TO ASSAIL G. O. P. CORRUPTION

that when a man talks about party responsibility he could not very well overlook anything as large as that."

Throughout his interview with the reporters, the governor's daughter, Mrs. John A. Warner, sat at his elbow. It was the first press conference she had attended, either in Albany or since the nominee took the road a week ago tonight for his first stump tour.

Questioning brought out that Mr. Smith had not determined what he would talk about in his speeches at St. Paul Thursday night and Milwaukee Saturday night.

Recalling that in Denver, the governor had informed newspapermen that during the campaign he intended to devote a speech to the tariff question, a correspondent asked whether he had determined where that address would be made.

"No," the candidate replied, "there has been nothing agreed upon beyond Monday night."

Rather Good Topic.

"That is a rather good topic for this part of the country, because the sugar beet, wool, cattle, hides and all that sort of thing that are raised out here," he was suggested.

"What I am saying is that the tariff being heard all over the country, judging from the telegrams that are coming in," Mr. Smith responded. "With the tariff question, there is a difference where you discuss a certain topic because you can talk in Omaha and get letters from California, Massachusetts, Oregon and Florida. Those are the four ends of the blanket."

When the governor's attention was called to Denver newspaper accounts which said he had told a group of farm leaders yesterday that he favored a high tariff on sugar as a protection to sugar beet growers, he remarked that they had not asked him anything about the tariff, and that they had been with him only a few minutes.

"Then you did not commit yourself on the tariff?"

"No."

Pleased With Reception.
Looking back over his first week of active campaigning, the democratic standard bearer said he had been "agreeably surprised" at the reception he had received.

"Naturally," he added, "the enthusiasm of the crowds and size of the gatherings have been very pleasing and hopeful. I am entirely satisfied with this week's work."

Before leaving Denver at 11 a. m. today, Governor Smith made a stop at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. He was accompanied by Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Warner, Mrs. Daniel O'Day, vice chairman of the democratic state committee of New York; William F. Kenny, the governor's close friend, and Charles W. Berry, controller of New York city, who is abroad the train as a physician.

Governor Smith's address at Helena, tomorrow night from 10 to 11 p. m., Atlanta time, will be broadcast by these stations:

KUOM, Missoula, Mont.; KSEL, Pocatello, Idaho; KSL, Salt Lake City; KOA, Denver; KFB, Lincoln, Neb.; KOIL, Council Bluffs; KMA, Shenandoah, Iowa; WHO, Des Moines; WCCO, Minneapolis; WIAF, Kansas City; KFJC, Joseph, Mo.; KVOO, Tulsa, Okla.; KFH, Wichita; KFJE, Oklahoma City; KGH, Billings; KFYR, Bismarck; WDAY, Fargo, N. D.

MOSES TERMS SMITH FACING-BOTH-WAYS

Concord, N. H., September 23.—(AP) Senator George H. Moses, vice chairman of the republican eastern advisory committee, in commenting tonight on Governor Smith's Denver speech, referred to the democratic presidential nominee as "Mr. Facing-both-ways" descending "from his eleven car, million dollar special train to spread light and learning in those sections of the country which are unaccustomed to the effluence of the brown derby."

The New Hampshire senator described Governor Smith's speech as typical Tammany misrepresentation, and said that the governor "misrepresents, distorts, bisects sentences and employs periphrastic phrases to make his points."

Senator Moses' comment was as follows:

"Mr. Facing-both-ways has again descended from his eleven car, million dollar special train to spread light and learning in those sections of the country which are unaccustomed to the effluence of the brown derby."

Denver, as at Omaha, the democratic candidate put out a line of goods designed for local consumption. At Omaha he was eager to make it clear that he favors the equalization of the tariff—but does he?

At Denver he was eager to make it appear that he favored government ownership and direction of public utilities—but does he?

Uses Enormous Words.
His Denver speech was a typical so little worried among the government misrepresentation. He misrepresents, distorts, bisects sentences and employs periphrastic phrases to make his points. For instance, he seeks to connect Mr. Hoover with the so-called power trust upon the horrendous proof that two former employees of the department of commerce were lured away from the public service by power companies which offered them large salaries and which have these men in their employ. That is good testimony to the kind of men Mr. Hoover has induced to enter the public service.

"The candidate neglects to say that three of his own chief financial backers in this campaign—Messrs. Young, Brady and Ryan—are also three of the most powerful members of the committee of the power trust which has directed the work of the so-called power lobby. It was they who induced these government employees to leave public service; and it is their committee which is now under investigation by the federal trade commission, and it is worth recalling that the motion which sent the Walsh resolution to the trade commission, instead of entrusting it to a committee of the senate, was made by a democratic senator and was supported by a large section of the democratic membership of that body."

Charges Too Many I's.
Just what is Governor Smith's power plan? He seems to be for government ownership—but is he? His proposal in effect, is that the federal government shall bear all the cost and take all the risk of building water-power plants and that it shall then pass them—or the power from them—over to the power trust, if there is one outside of Governor Smith's imagination, does not distribute electrical energy at a loss. No wonder there is a little worried among the governor's backers over his Denver utterance. But how about the rest of the taxpayers who will have to advance the money for these power plants and who will have to buy the current from them? The answer to this will come, of course, when the candidate returns to the east and begins to spread his adaptable gospel of political relief for all classes and conditions of the American people.

"Scrutiny of the partial text of the candidate's Denver speech, as printed by the New England newspapers, reveals his customary modesty. The first personal pronoun appears only 44 times."

CARLTON ASKS QUICK AID FOR SUFFERERS

BY N. S. NOBLE,
City Editor The Constitution.

West Palm Beach, Fla., September 23.—Doyle E. Carlton, of Tampa, democratic nominee and next governor of Florida, returned to this city from his five days' survey of the hurricane-stricken area of south Florida.

After going into practically every city, town and settlement both in the Okechobee and along the coast to all points in Palm Beach and Broward counties, Mr. Carlton Saturday night issued a statement in which he urged the people of Florida to hurry their aid to a few sections. Mr. Carlton visited Okechobee City Tuesday, returning to Tampa Wednesday.

to raise relief funds; arrived in Okechobee City again Thursday and then came to West Palm Beach.

Friday he visited Belle Glade, South Bay, Big Cramer island, Palokoke and Canal Point. Today he went to West Palm Beach, Lake Worth, Delray, Deerfield and Pompano.

Mr. Carlton's statement follows: "The loss of life and property is enormous, especially when we consider the very limited area of the state affected."

"If, however, the people outside the stricken area will match with their money the spirit of the people within, what seems at first sight to be ruin will soon be turned into healthful cities and communities."

"I have never seen a more courageous or confident spirit and better team work in behalf of one another."

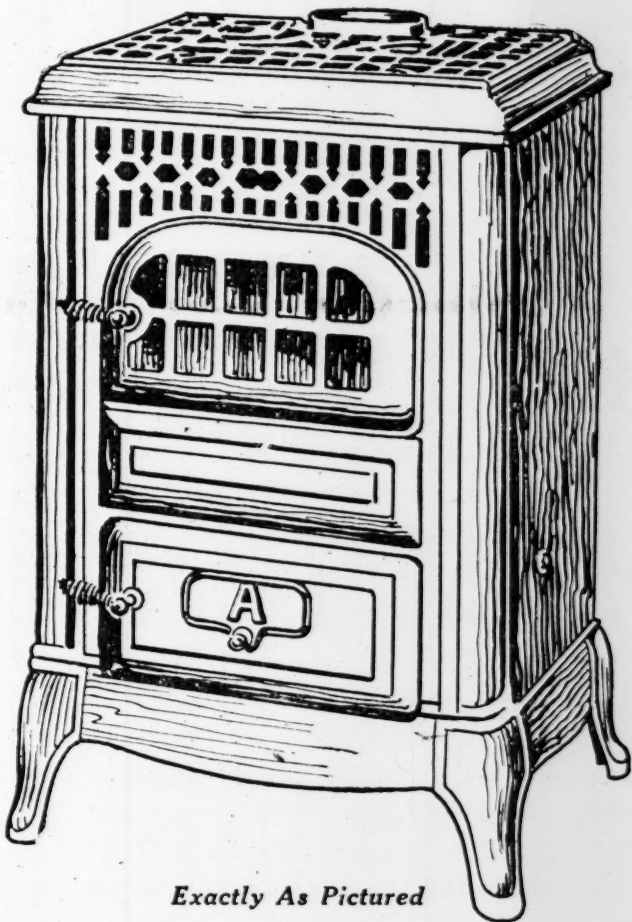

"Our people cannot escape, nor would they if they could, their obligation in this matter. Disasters like these seldom ever come, but may strike anywhere. Earthquakes, floods, hurricanes and other disasters wrought by nature have no fixed schedule, and are not respecters of places."

"Let all people who are favored at this time show their gratitude and lend a most generous hand."

CURTIS FALLS VICTIM TO LARYNGITIS ATTACK

En Route With Senator Curtis in Idaho, September 23.—(P)—Bothered by an attack of acute laryngitis, Senator Curtis, the republican vice presidential nominee, today put a ban against any more outdoor speaking engagements on his western tour.

The senator notified the republican national committee of the impossibility of speaking outdoors in the future on advice of Dr. R. C. Monahan, of Butte, who examined his throat today upon his visit to that city.

The veteran campaigner has been making from two to fourteen speeches a day since leaving Chicago last Tuesday, and with few exceptions all have been in the open air in all manner of weather, and in competition many times with strong winds, passing trains and other noises.

Dr. Monahan declared Mr. Curtis has a "very bad throat" as the result of his excessive speaking, but he believes his voice could be kept in condition if future speaking engagements were confined to indoors. Otherwise he seemed none the worse for the strenuous week. Although a little weary, making the turn homeward on his western swing, Senator Curtis traveled across Montana and Idaho today. He was met by large crowds at Butte, Idaho Falls, Pocatello and other stops, but because of the Sabbath and the condition of his voice he declined to make any speeches.

Another full week of campaigning faces him before he gets into Chicago a week from Tuesday for a few days of rest.

By coincidence the trail of the senator this week doubles back over much of the route followed by Governor Smith on his western jaunt, and there were signs today that the republican vice presidential nominee was sharpening his tomahawk to go after the democratic candidate from some of the same platforms occupied by his foe.

The program for Curtis this week includes Cheyenne, Wyo., tomorrow night, and Denver tomorrow night; Omaha, Tuesday; Springfield, Mo., Wednesday; Tulsa, Okla., Thursday; Oklahoma City and Lawton, Okla., Friday; Perry and Enid, Okla., Saturday. Several other stops in Oklahoma had been arranged. From Oklahoma the senator will return to his home in Topeka over Sunday.

13 HURT, 3 SERIOUSLY, IN CRASH AT NEWMAN

Newman, Ga., September 23.—(P)—Several skulls and bruises suffered by Engineers Al Aiken and John Young, both of Columbus, Ga., probable serious injuries to one passenger and slight injury to 10 others were announced today by railroad officials to be the total casualties of last night's head-on crash of two Columbus-Atlanta passenger trains on the Central of Georgia railway here.

Both engineers were taken to a local hospital. John Davis, of Murphreesboro, Tenn., was believed to have suffered internal injuries. B. M. Blackburn, Atlanta attorney, received lacerations about the arms and legs, being dismissed from the local hospital along with eight other persons after receiving attention.

The trains were running at a low speed when they met, and none of the passenger cars left the tracks.

The train from Atlanta had arrived here over the tracks of the A. and W. P. and was in the Central of Georgia yards, just leaving Newman, when the train from Columbus met it.

Misunderstanding of "meet" orders was said to have caused the crash.

Superintendent M. B. Smith, of the Central of Georgia, will conduct an investigation at the scene of the accident tomorrow, it was ascertained.

SMITH'S PRACTICAL WORK FOR RELIEF

farmer gets for his products and price the city consumer pays for them.

Smith, as governor, has sought to bridge this gap and secure better returns for both the producer and the consumer by encouraging the development of farmers' cooperatives and by the building of terminal markets under state control in which the farmers might dispose of their products without paying an unjust toll to middlemen.

Cooperative Marketing.
In 1923, with Governor Smith's approval, the various cooperative marketing acts then on the statute books were revised and combined into a single comprehensive cooperative corporation law. Under this act the farmers of New York enjoy as great opportunities for cooperative activities in buying and selling as those of any other state. As a result there are now in New York approximately 1,100 active cooperative associations doing a combined annual business of more than $115,000,000.

Smith's efforts to promote the development of terminal markets for the handling of farm products with a minimum of charges, and middlemen's tolls have not been wholly successful. The farmers do not use these markets as largely as expected. Some of these terminal markets Governor Smith planned to locate on the Erie Canal so that the farmers might enjoy a maximum transportation cost. But they have never developed as planned. The blame for this he places squarely on the so-called council of farms and markets, which under the peculiar law of New York, is chosen by the legislature and controls the state department of agriculture entirely independent of the governor.

Thorn in Smith's Side.
The unsatisfactory operation of this council of farms and markets has always been a thorn in Smith's side. It is an attempt to apply a commission form of government under legislative appointment and control to the problems of agriculture. Smith is a stickler for official responsibility and has repeatedly denounced this council of farms and markets as irresponsible and inefficient. His experience with it may in some measure account for his hesitancy to endorse the McNary-Haugen bill which places the handling of the crop surpluses in a federal farm board, which might in practice prove equally irresponsible.

Governor Smith has repeatedly shown concern over the steady drain from the farms to the cities. Eight years ago, before his presidential aspirations had developed and before agricultural distress had become acute he said:

"We are fed and clothed from the land, and every dollar of state money that is expended for the promotion of agriculture brings back through the channels of trade a two-fold return to the people of the great municipalities, who have to live on the products of the farms. As a small boy, I remember one part of Bryan's famous speech at the national convention in Chicago in 1896. He said, 'Burn down the farms and grass will grow in the streets of your great cities.' I think that is keenly appreciated by every student of government in this state."

Message to Legislature.
This year in his annual message to the legislature he said:
"The promotion of the interests of those who till the soil is certainly a vital concern to the government of the state. Both national and state policies should be molded to insure equality of opportunity and reward between these groups which produce the food and those who consume it."

How is this equality to be secured? On this point Governor Smith has not yet fully declared his program. He stands, he declares, for the principle enunciated by the Houston platform that the government should join with the farmers' cooperative associations in marketing the agricultural surpluses, the cost to be distributed over the marketed units of the crop whose producers are benefited. This is declared by many farm leaders to be satisfactory. He has repudiated, however, the detailed provisions of the equalization fee as set forth in the McNary-Haugen bill, but has not yet suggested an alternative plan.

This is not surprising. It is no secret in Washington that in spite of the overwhelming majority in favor of this measure, there were few senators and congressmen who did not cherish doubts as to the practical working of the equalization fee and other features of the bill. They voted for it, however, as the only measure that promised relief adequate to meet the prevailing agricultural distress.

Smith's Pledge.
Smith's pledge in his message to the president of the Indiana farm bureau federation to call a conference of farm leaders and experts, including Governor Lowden, immediately after election to work out a detailed program is an attempt to meet this situation.

This is typical of the New York governor's method of tackling difficult economic and social problems. He employed it with marked success in dealing with housing, water power, crime and other perplexing questions that arose after the world war. Out of those conferences came definite legislative proposals many of which Governor Smith succeeded in forcing through a hostile legislature.

Admitting, as a graduate of the Fulton Fish market, his own lack of omniscience, Smith has repeatedly sought expert advice to achieve practical solutions of perplexing problems and may thus succeed in cutting the Gordian knot of agriculture.

HOOVER'S THEORY PLAN FOR RELIEF

sweeping and unequivocal have been these denunciations that it is difficult to credit Senator McNary's recent statement forecasting Hoover's endorsement of the substance of the McNary-Haugen plan without the equalization fee.

In what he termed "long view policies for improvement of the farmers' profits" Hoover has outlined as secretary of commerce the program which, if elected president, would undoubtedly seek to promote.

The first and essential step in such a program, Hoover declared, is the reorganization of farm marketing by the development of a national system of cooperatives under the control of the farmer. To promote and foster this he recommends the creation of a federal cooperative marketing board. Every line of agricultural production would be organized as nearly as possible on a 100 per cent basis so as to insure the complete control of the product necessary to create national standards of quality, eliminate local gluts, famines and reconsumptions, and store or convert into useful by-products any unmanageable surplus.

Hoover has no fear that such organization of agriculture will result in an unbearable monopoly controlling prices. "There can never be a combination of farmers that can rob the public," he said. "No agriculture can set up artificial barriers against the long-run effect of supply and demand; for increased production stands ready for action, with advancing speed at every cent advance in price over the fair return to the farmer."

"Big Business" Organization.
In other words, Hoover would meet the "big business" organizations of industry, finance and commerce with like "big business" organization of agriculture, and thus equip the American farmer to meet the trusts on their own ground.

Hoover has often pointed to the tariff as another big business weapon which the farmer can use effectively. He would, however, raise the tariff not on wheat and other farm products of which the American farmer is now producing a surplus, but on those products such as wool, sugar, vegetable oils and flax which will grow on our soil but of which we are importing huge quantities annually. By raising the tariff wall so as to give greater encouragement to the growing of those products which are now imported, he expects to displace a large amount of acreage now devoted to wheat and other products of which we produce a surplus. This, he believes, will not only increase farm prosperity but make the nation as a whole more largely independent in peace and war.

Third in his program comes the elimination of the periodic booms and depressions in the business world which alternately overstimulate and destroy the farmers' market. "The farmers," says Hoover, "should resent a boom more than anything else that can happen in our economic system because it means the cost of a large amount of acreage now devoted to wheat and other products of which we produce a surplus. This, he believes, will not only increase farm prosperity but make the nation as a whole more largely independent in peace and war."

Reduce Cost of Necessities.
The fourth step in Hoover's "long view" farm policy is the reduction of the costs of what the farmer buys. This, he believes, can be largely achieved by avoiding the enormous waste in industry and commerce due to speculation, seasonal production, deficient standards, excessive sizes and grades, bad credits, unfair practices and destructive competition. These wastes in his opinion constitute 25 to 30 per cent of the cost paid by the consumer.

Finally Hoover proposes to revolutionize the farmers' cost of transportation not only by a reduction of railroad freight rates on farm products, but by the creation of a colossal system of inland waterways that will have substantially every section of the country access to deep water leading to the Atlantic, the Gulf of Mexico or the Pacific ocean.

Farm critics of this "long view" program for American agriculture, while admitting the value of many of his proposals, say: "We want relief while the present generation of American farmers is still living. If we wait for Mr. Hoover to reorganize all the 6,000,000 farmers into cooperatives, eliminate business booms and depressions, teach the trusts to be good and cut prices and on top of it all secure the appropriations to build the inland waterway system the farmers will all be dead. We want relief and some measure of American prosperity now, without waiting for the millennium."

It is Hoover's official record during seven years in the Harding-Coolidge cabinet, during which time he strongly opposed the emergency relief plans of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, without offering an alternative plan acceptable to farm leaders north and south, that probably accounts for a more sympathetic attitude of the farm problem. The official farm record of Secretary Hoover is best epitomized in the principles written into the republican platform and adopted over the protest of the farm organizations at Kansas City.

Fire Menaces 2,500 Persons In Hospital

Jackson, Miss., September 23.—(P)—Fire broke out here early today on the fourth floor of the State Insane hospital, in which 2,500 persons were housed, and caused $15,000 damages before it was brought under control.

An inmate is believed to have set a mattress on fire either to get a thrill, or in the hope of escaping during the resulting disorders.

Inmates living on the upper floors were marched to the first floor without trouble while firemen battled the flames and succeeded in confining them to the fourth floor and roof. Two drug addicts escaped.

The fire was discovered when the day attendants came on duty.

Dr. C. D. Mitchell, superintendent, said that the fire was a "providential warning to the governor and the legislature to forget politics and permit completion of the new hospital near here. The building is a veritable fire trap. Some night when fire breaks loose we will lose every patient because of the condition of the building, which is very old."

A new $5,000,000 hospital has been about half completed but work has been curtailed because of lack of appropriations.

KIDNAPED DETROIT MAN, CAPTIVE FIVE DAYS, IS RELEASED

Detroit, September 23.—(P)—Max Ruben, business agent and secretary of the Motion Picture Operators' union of Detroit, who was kidnaped from his office by four armed men late last Wednesday, returned to his office unharmed at 3 o'clock this morning, Ray W. Gagnon, president of the union, announced today.

According to Gagnon, "not a single cent" was paid for Ruben's release. Ruben, he said, had been held captive not more than five miles from the city limits.

New Fall Styles Introduce Colorful Upholstering Fabrics

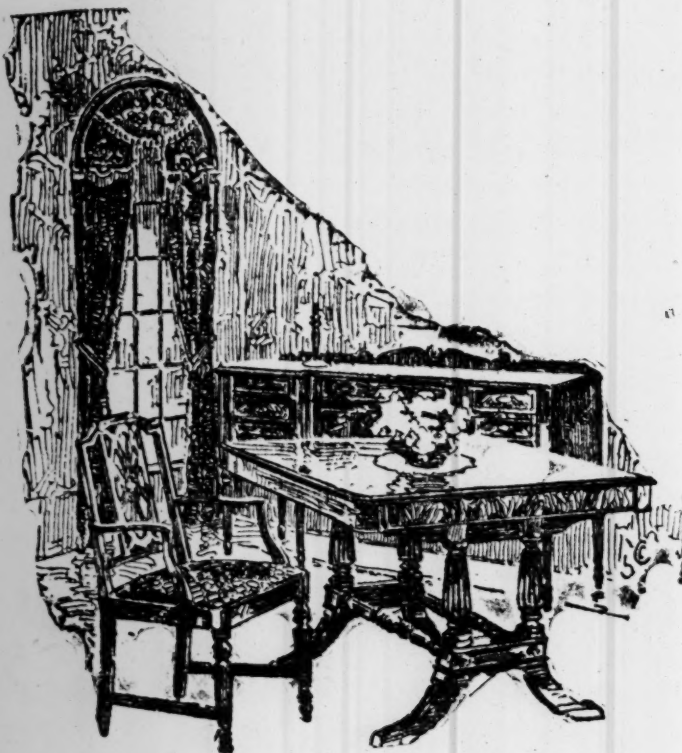

The popular trend of upholstering materials toward the bright and cheerful colors is a happy departure from the long prevailing popularity of plain taupe and similar dark colors, a most welcome mode and certainly a great step toward more cheerful living rooms. We invite your inspection of our new Living Room Furniture.

Bedroom Furniture, too, offered in the new styles and new finishes, has come in for its share of the unusual. On two large floors is displayed furniture for every type of bedroom, covering a wide price range that begins at $89.50.

This Berkey & Gay Grand Rapids mahogany bedroom suite (illustrated) is a reflection of the old New England classic and represents the efficiency of modern craftsmanship. The Bed,
Vanity, Chest of Drawers and bench are priced
$297.50.

Better Films Will Sponsor 'Simba' Showing

Mrs. Newton C. Wing, president of the Atlanta Better Films committee, announces that the committee will sponsor the showing of 'Simba', opening at the Erlanger Monday evening, and 4,000 letters have been issued to leading Atlantans, urging their attendance. Douglas Oliver, Atlanta Boy Scout, was selected for the honor of accompanying this expedition into Africa, and the proceeds of the showing of 'Simba' throughout the country will be used for the erection of a museum of African exhibits in memory of Carl Akeley, the explorer and camera man who lost his life on the expedition.

Mrs. West requests members of the Better Films executive board meet with her in the theater lobby Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock to act as a reception committee, as follows: Mesdames George Price, first vice president; Frank McCormack, second vice president; Miss Marianne McClellan, corresponding secretary; Mesdames C. Decker Tober, treasurer; Alonzo Richardson, parliamentarian; Dr. W. H. Faust, chairman of religious participation; E. R. Enlow, chairman of visual education; Mesdames John G. Courtney, chairman of finance; J. H. Savage, chairman of the West End junior matinee; D. H. Durden, chairman of the Palace junior matinee and Frank Naelede, extension chairman.

Mrs. George Price, first vice president and chairman of the films board, calls a meeting of the executive board meeting Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the board room of the chamber of commerce. The monthly meeting will be held at the Henry Grady hotel Thursday at 12:30 o'clock.

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

CUBBY BEAR MEETS A STRANGER.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Heed this advice, though it be trite: When meeting strangers be polite.

—Old Mother Nature.

Cubby Bear was shuffling along through the Green Forest with nothing particular on his mind. He hadn't anything in particular to do. I suspect he was just looking around for mischief. Cubby had started up the Lone Little Path. Halfway up the hill there was a sharp turn in that little path. Cubby had just started around that turn when he came face to face with a stranger.

Cubby gave a little start of surprise. The stranger didn't say a word. In fact, he didn't make a sound. He just grinned. If Cubby had known how about grins he would have known that that grin was not a happy grin. It was a frightened grin. That stranger was frightened.

But Cubby didn't notice this. He was too surprised to take note of much of anything. He had never seen anyone quite like this stranger. To begin with, this stranger wasn't very big. He wasn't, for instance, as big as Bobby Coon. He had a long, sharp face. His coat was rather whitish and looked as if it never had been brushed. He had a long tail, but there was no hair on it.

The stranger had stopped as abruptly as had Cubby Bear. Cubby Bear sat up. He was very likely to sit up when he wants to look at things. He seems to think he can see a better view, but of course he cannot. The stranger didn't sit up. He looked lastly to each side of him as if looking for a place to run. But he didn't run. He just grinned, and when he grinned he showed a mouthful of sharp teeth.

"Who are you?" demanded Cubby Bear most impudently. The stranger said nothing. He merely grinned a little more broadly than before. Cubby took a step forward. The stranger stood still, but he began to shake.

"Huh!" thought Cubby Bear. "He's afraid of me. Yes, sir, he's afraid of me. I wonder if he would make good eating?"

The moment Cubby felt that the stranger was afraid he himself felt very bold. It is usually that way. Cubby growled and tried to look very fierce. The stranger looked more afraid than ever. Still Cubby hesitated to attack him. He would much rather jump on him from behind than try for him in front. Cubby stepped behind a little bush. Perhaps the stranger would pass on down the Lone Little Path and he could follow him. In stepping behind the little bush Cubby turned his head for a moment. When he looked around from the other side of the bush the stranger had disappeared. Cubby stepped right out into the Lone Little Path and down the Lone Little Path and down the Lone Little Path. The stranger was nowhere to be seen. Then Cubby supervisor, was a pleasant visitor to the Brookhaven school Monday.

A STYLISH DESIGN.

6214. Very smart and natural in this artistic model. It makes an excellent afternoon dress in printed chiffon over a flesh color corse slip. It will also be attractive in polka dot silk, and is equally pleasing in georgette or satin. The waist is bloused on an underbody, above a fitted yoke, to which the skirt is attached, that features the popular slant, dipping at the right side to match a similar shaping on the bolero. The bolero may be finished separately or omitted.

The pattern is cut in five sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. To make this charming model as portrayed in the large view for a 38-inch size will require 1 yard of 32-inch lining for the underbody, and 5 5/8 yards of 35-inch material for the dress. If made without bolero, 4 1/4 yards of 35-inch material is required. The width of the dress at the lower edge with fullness extended is 2 1/2 yards.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c in silver or stamps.

Sent 12c in silver or stamps for our up-to-date spring and summer 1928 book of fashions.

Hollywood, Calif., September 23.—A director who wanted to get a real tie effect was making a circus picture. An aerial trapeze artist was to fall from the top of the tent. And several thousand extras were to register surprise, horror and so on.

Dr. Murnau, the director, knew it would take more than the usual insurance to get his shot. The camera was arranged to drop on a cable toward the ground. And this moving shot was to record the drama of the moment in the faces of the audience.

They were told to look up, and at a given signal to register amazed horror. What they were not told was that sixteen guns, some ear-splitting sirens and various assorted bedlam were to be released at the same moment.

Murnau got his realistic effect. Two women fainted dead away. Others jumped almost out of their skins. Yells, near panic—the usual reaction of a few hundred Americans under an abnormal condition. Which was just what the director wanted.

It's lots of fun being an extra. No boredom. You never know just what's going to happen next. And all for $7.50 a day.

Lina Basquette had to reverse the usual romance procedure. Girls generally announce their engagements. But Lina had to make an announcement that she is not engaged to Everett Marley, is not going to be engaged to him, and doesn't intend to marry anybody for the time being.

This formal statement, mailed to all concerned, is just another evidence of the strength of rumors in cinemaland. Lina appeared with Marley in public a few times, and it seemed that their marriage was announced in print in several localities.

Theodore Roberts back at work on the studio lots is a goodly sight. Puffing away at the old cigar, he sat on the side lines waiting to be called.

Theodore Roberts back at work on the studio lots is a goodly sight. Puffing away at the old cigar, he sat on the side lines waiting to be called.

That the year and a half which he has been absent from pictures was filled with tragic consequences shows in Roberts' face. His was one of the most severe breakdowns in film history.

William Farnum was forced to drop out of pictures due to illness. After four years away from the cameras—years fraught with tremendous loss in money and spirit, he was cast for a big part. His return was heralded on all sides. For Farnum had a tremendous following.

Rheumatism attacked him the very week his big comeback was to begin. The part had to be given to another actor, and disappointment and illness settled down on "Bill" Farnum again.

There may be another opening at another time. But movies do not permit such chances very often.

Puzzams makes $30 a day, and seldom lacks work. Before I unduly encourage a raft of movie-struck girls I should announce that this is a dark Maltese cat, the very Bernhart of felines.

She can register almost any kind of emotion her tribe is heir to. And she is the property of two girls who almost starved to death trying to break into the movies. They found a stray cat in a lot one night and took her in to share their meager allowance of food and milk.

The grateful lady is rewarding them handsomely.

He writes titles for a big studio. And he met his quota of actors and actresses.

His dinner partner asked him vaguely, "Now Mr. Soandso, just what constitutes a star?"

He answered readily: "A couple of divorces; a couple of lawsuits; a couple of face-lifts."

By train, "way freight" will become express service, continental trains will go through Chicago without change, repeated loading and unloading will be largely eliminated, every waterway will turn out a new ship.

John knows that great consolidations will take place, railroads which do not pay will be abandoned or the service modified; that the "public be praised" idea has already taken the place of Vanderbilt's opinion of the public and that while railroads have a place in the world's business they have to hunt, fight and work for it just as much, even more, than a so-called "new business."

John has entered a vocation that is far from stabilized. Rather it is one open to many changes, subject to many problems, harassed by much competition, hemmed in by many laws and regulations.

President John Coolidge of United Railways, we salute you!

THE NIGHTMARE

By GERALD MYGATT

SYNOPSIS.

Patricia Shaw is being entertained in one of New York's night clubs by Fanning Edgerton. She is annoyed by the insistent stare of a hawk-nosed man on the opposite side of the room. At the table with the hawk are a blonde, coarse-looking woman and a slight young man who appears to be drunk. The hawk-nosed man calls young Edgerton away from his table on a pretext, and as soon as he is gone the hawk approaches Patricia and tries to engage her in conversation. He is interrupted by a good-looking young chap who orders him back to his place. The newcomer introduces himself as Jimmie Kirklin. Patricia tells Kirklin that she thinks the hawk-nosed person had asked the head waiter to get rid of her escort. A fight ensues and Fanning Edgerton walks in on it. He pays the head waiter to remove order and Patricia introduces Kirklin to him and then asks Fanning to take her home. A few minutes later, as Kirklin is leaving the place with his companion, he is accosted by a stranger on the street who appears to be drunk.

INSTALLMENT VII. A BUSINESS DEAL.

"Been in there?" the man asked, joining them, Jimmy peered at him and was conscious of a feeling that he had seen this individual before somewhere, though he couldn't remember when or where. He was a little man of languid air; just that and nothing much else. What features he may or may not have had were shadowed by the broad turned down brim of a gaudily hatted Panama hat.

Now it so happened that Jimmy was inclined to be a little irritable. In the first place he had missed Patricia, and even though his common sense had told him she would be gone by the time he got out, he was conscious nevertheless of a gnawing disappointment; an emptiness. In the second place he was beginning to be smitten with a suspicion—never a comforting suspicion for anyone—that perhaps he had made something of a damn fool of himself back there in that so-called night club. Why, after all, had it been necessary for him to start things, or rather stop things, by letting that itching fist of his drive out? At the moment, of course, it had seemed the only thing to do. Miss Shaw was being annoyed and her annoyance, upon being spoken to, had consigned Jimmy to a very definite place in three short, unpleasant words. Those words, under the circumstances, surely rated a wallop. On top of which the guy had pulled a gun. Yes, that rated a wallop without question. But still, Jimmy had to admit, he had been instrumental in making a scene and this scene he had made was probably what had forced Patricia to go home. Spoiled her evening, he thought unceasingly.

He glowered a little therefore when the hawk-nosed stranger who had pried himself off the neighboring stool asked him questions "Been in there?" was what the man asked.

Jimmy favored him with a look which was meant to destroy him. The little man absorbed the look as the desert absorbs a spilled bucket of water.

"Swell place. They stick you though," he remarked genially. Then he added, "I've been in there myself."

"Very interesting," said the boy called Ted with infinite sarcasm.

"Not very," said the little man pleasantly. "I was just makin' conversation. Nice night for conversation."

Jimmy said: "Come on, Ted. Let's stroll. And they started walking only to find the little man patterning behind them.

"What's the sweat?" he queried. "Beat it, will you?" said Jimmy.

"Just what I'm doin', only you keep gettin' in my way. Here I am beatin' it as hard as I can and you keep gettin' in my way. What do you think this is, a foot race?"

Jimmy and Ted exchanged glances and then laughed in spite of themselves.

"That's better," said their companion. "I like to hear laughter. Miraculous laughter, gift of the gods, cleanses the soul of sin. Also loosens up the lining of your throat. Wonderful piece of work, the lining of the throat. Think what it has to stand in the course of an ordinary day—talk 'em out of food and drink comin' in."

"Specially drink. That's a test."

"O, shut up," said Jimmy curtly. "Where we goin'?" asked the little man.

Ted tugged at Jimmy's sleeve and they stopped abruptly in their fast, long stride.

"Now, listen," said Ted to the man. "We're going home. We don't give a damn where you're going. Only you're going to start there right now. Savvy?"

"Pronounced more like 'savvy,'" the stranger commented blithely. "Last syllable should be like the 'ay' in 'hay.' Or for that matter like the 'ay' in 'say' or 'day.' You mean to tell me you don't give a damn where I'm goin'? Why, I'm goin' with you."

"O, no you're not."

"O, yes I am."

They were now almost to Fifth avenue and Jimmy suddenly shrieked at a passing cab. The cab stopped, circled, slid up beside them.

"In-ha?" remarked Ted genially to the little man. "Now see whether you're going with us or not. Good night and sweet dreams—and don't forget the lining of your throat." The two young men ducked into the cab and slammed the door. From beyond the glass the driver beamed at them reproachfully.

"You would leave me, would you?" he observed. Then he approached the front seat and addressed the driver. "These two gentlemen want to shake me. It makes me feel very badly. They haven't told you where they want to go, but that doesn't matter. They think I'll follow them, but I won't. I won't play at all if I can't go right along with 'em. Drive on, driver."

The taxi started with a lurch and presently the driver slid open the front window and presented an attentive ear. Jimmy mentioned the name of his hotel.

"Yes, sir," said the driver, and added: "You gave that bird the slip all right. I'll bet he's still standing there wondering what it's all about."

"They all laughed pleasantly and they were still chuckling as the cab drew up beneath the hotel's ornate marquee. Ted, who lived far uptown, slid away presently in the taxi. Jimmy sauntered sleepily into the lobby. Had he looked behind him it is not impossible that he might have been slightly surprised, for a slim little man in a turned down gaudily hatted Panama hat stood just back of his shoulder as he gave his room number and asked for his key.

"Any messages?" Jimmy asked.

"No, Mr. — (O, yes—Kirklin.)"

Jimmy walked to the elevator but the slim little man turned away. He was smiling a smile of keen satisfaction though he was engaged in rubbing smudges of dust and dirt from his hands and clothing.

"I do wish they'd keep their spare tires closer," said the little man to himself. "At that, it's all in the game. I've got this one's name and address and the other one we know. Between 'em they'll lead us to the girl." He chuckled and added: "That's my Doney Joe. Clever kid, if I do say it."

The hawk-nosed black-browed man still sat at his table in the Gilded Lily, pulling contemplatively on a large oily cigar. The smoke rose and billowed over his head in a slowly eddying cloud, gray blue or ruddy gold as the amber light's caught it. Across the table from him the silk-shirted woman of the mustard colored hair was diligently giving back to a tiny round mirror those unspeakable and unrecognizable distortions of mouth and feature which seem to be a strangely hallowed part of the function of feminine makeup. She touched the point of her chin and the lobes of her ears with rouge. She employed a black grease pencil and her eyes became darker. She chose a crayon of red grose and examined her lips.

The hawk-nosed man eyed her coldly. "Didn't bring a shaving outfit with you, did you?" he queried with a curl of his upper lip. "Maybe I could borrow it."

She said sharply, "O, shut up!"

He said: "Forget you're a woman for 15 minutes. I need your brain."

"Yes," he belatedly replied.

"That's what I said—brain. There aren't going to be any mistakes in this little business deal. We're going to take our time about it and think it out—from soup to nuts, from caviar and cocktails to coffee and liqueur. There aren't going to be any missing parts in this puzzle, Queenie. There aren't going to be any fool sins. There aren't going to be any clues—not a clue. We've been working on it too long. We're a good business team, me and you and the Doc. I have a hunch we know our groceries."

"If we don't know 'em," the woman smiled, "there's a big gray sanitarium up the river with 'welcome' on the mat. I'm not venting for any one-way ticket to Ossining, Bart."

"That's what I say," the man growled. "I can do without a free subscription to 'The Star of Hope.' Me, I want to pick my own barber. Which reminds me. We wasn't figurin' on our party tonight. If he was fool enough to lay his knuckles against me he may be fool enough to start almost anything. What say I give Max a little talk and send 'em to the gate?"

"I was thinkin' of that myself," the woman nodded.

The man signalled peremptorily to the head waiter. Max slid over to them on noiseless feet, bowing and rubbing his hands.

"Sit down," the hawk-nosed one directed.

Georgia Steadily Gaining Supremacy in Apple Growing

The editor of this department visited one of the largest apple orchards in eastern North America last week, which is located about 16 miles southwest of Cedarhurst, Ga.

This large orchard is owned by the Porter brothers and associates and is under the management of C. R. Porter, who, with his brother, Caldwell Porter, is also owner of the Yonah mountain in North Georgia.

Through the large packing plant where they are boxing for the market around 1,000 boxes every day at this time of the year.

A visit through the plant is in itself an interesting experience. As fast as the heavy laden trucks arrive at the plant with the variety that is being picked, the apples are dumped into a canvas carrier which quickly conveys them to a number of large revolving brushes. These remove all residue of the spraying material and they are again deposited upon another large canvas conveyor, where a large number of women graders remove all culls and misshapen apples. From here they go to an ingenious rolling device that separates all apples according to size, depositing the different sizes in canvas bins where with great rapidity young women wrap them in tissue paper and place them in boxes to be nailed up and conveyed to the large storage cellars, where as much as 20 carlots can be stored at one time.

During our brief three-hour stay two cars were loaded to be sold under the direction of the Apple Growers' exchange, of which J. Frank Beck, of Atlanta, is president, and Caldwell Porter, of Cornelia, is secretary.

While the apples of this orchard are in high demand in all large eastern cities, the majority of the carlot shipments this year have been sent to Charleston, S. C. Some have been for the marines stationed near there, the balance being for export shipment.

At the conclusion of our visit we called on C. R. Porter at his beautiful home near Rome on the Lindale road and we found Mr. Porter optimistic about the future of the apple industry in this part of the country.

He stated that "if those land owners who have hilly land that they cannot successfully cultivate with other crops, will plant it with the better grades of apple trees and take a little care of those trees while they are young, the same trees will take care of them when they get too old to take care of themselves."

"Another thing," concluded Mr. Porter, "that we have found is that the soil of the high hills of Georgia and Alabama is helping us to produce a very fine shipping apple and those that are grown on the mountains or high plateaus put on a very pleasing color. We attribute much credit for this to the cool nights and the warm sunshine we have in harvest time, so that nature itself is assisting in the growth of the fruit, the supremacy in growing America's finest apples."

LUXURY OF SMITH TRAIN HURTS CAUSE, BROOKHART CLAIMS
Chicago, September 23.—(United News.)—Governor Smith cannot travel in the corn-belt farmers' vote by traveling in a style which "surpassed the luxury of emperors of old," Senator Smith V. Brookhart of Iowa, declared in a statement here tonight.

"No king or potentate in the history of the world ever traveled in such luxury," Senator Brookhart said, "and that train is a stronger argument with the farmers than anything Governor Smith can say. Such splendor for the champion of democracy is the best evidence of what the farmer can expect from Governor Smith and show how much he knows about the farm problem."

The private car, St. Nicholas, of William F. Keady, close friend of Governor Smith and millionaire New York contractor, and ten other cars comprise the Smith campaign train.

Oil-O-Matic Heating Men At Henry Grady This Week

The Williams Oil-O-Matic Heating corporation, of Bloomington, Ill., manufacturer of the well-known Oil-O-Matic oil burner and the new Dist-O-Matic for small homes, and also the new Dist-O-Matic as well as the electric refrigerator, Ice-O-Matic, is having its semi-annual sales meeting and service school at the Henry Grady hotel next Thursday and Friday, September 27 and 28.

Dealers, salesmen and service men from all parts of Georgia, Florida and Alabama will attend and from the hotel next Thursday and Friday, September 27 and 28.

These meetings are open to any interested prospective salesmen and dealers together with the already well represented dealer organization. Sales plans, advertising program as well as service and installation subjects are discussed. Those meetings further promote close relations between factory and dealer organizations and at the urgent request of the dealer organization, efforts will be made to make these gatherings a semi-annual affair.

Adoption of labor saving devices for the fuel oil burner and the new Dist-O-Matic has fallen far behind installation of time and work-savers in business houses, states Willis M. Timmons, district manager of the Atlanta branch for Williams Oil-O-Matic. Many business men who use

Business Men Are Seeking New Business, Says Leader

Despite all the talk of politics, business men generally are getting ready to launch their "fall offensive." Indications are that advertising will be used more this fall and winter by southern manufacturers than at any like period in recent years.

According to S. Guthman, president of the Atlanta Envelope company—an institution here in Atlanta for 35 years—the months ahead are of the kind which will bring new business. "I do not look for any sudden upturn or anything at all like a boom," he declared. "But I do feel that there is going to be plenty of business for those that seek it intelligently."

The head of the Atlanta Envelope company is convinced that the attention is being given the catalogs being prepared this fall than ever before. Professional advertising men are being called into conference more than ever here in the south, and told to employ their ingenuity in laying out the catalog pages to make them more attractive.

FIRST SNOW FLURRY REPORTED IN MIDWEST
Chicago, September 23.—(United News.)—The middle west awoke today to find the weather man had made a miscalculation in his calendar observations and sent unseasonable frigid blasts from the north that dropped the thermometer down to 42 degrees above zero.

The drop was sudden in this immediate area where an Indian summer was enjoyed Saturday.

Chicagoans who were garbed in summer clothes Saturday made a rush for overcoats and furs today. The suddenness of the drop was felt keenly in the city and thousands of appeals were received by apartment owners from tenants asking for heat.

Reports received from cities throughout the middle west indicated the cold weather was general. Towns in northern Wisconsin and Minneapolis reported slight flurries of snow and near freezing temperatures.

The weather bureau here announced the unseasonable cold had moved down from Canada where the thermometer registered below freezing temperatures at several points.

Monday's forecast is for frost in the morning with rising temperatures in the afternoon.

MORE "EVIDENCE" IN MURDER FARM REPORTED FOUND
Riverside, Cal., September 23.—(AP)—While Gordon Stuart Norcross, self-styled motion picture actor, protested in his cell at Vancouver, B. C., that he was innocent of the charges of killing kidnapped boys on a "murder farm" near here, authorities continued today to add to a web of circumstantial evidence through which they hope to send the fugitive to the gallows.

A snake collector, L. C. Howe, added the latest bit of evidence against Norcross when he told to Canada after abandoning the farm which he says was used as a chicken ranch.

Search of a grave reported by the snake collector in a remote desert canyon on the edge of the Cocalhella valley resulted in the finding of the remains of a fire, a partly burned traveling bag, a change of money, a Bible and burned pages of a newspaper.

Partly burned pieces of clothing resembling knit undershorts, were found and several pieces of a letter written in a scrawl were discovered. All the articles were brought to Riverside for examination by the FBI.

Governor C. C. Young has requested Secretary of State Kellogg to advise the Canadian authorities that warrants and extradition papers are en route to Vancouver for Norcross and his mother, Mrs. Sarah Louise Norcross, who is jointly accused of murder with her son.

adding machines and cash registers still go home every evening to homes lighted and heated by out-of-date methods.

"Heating the home is the last important domestic operation to be made automatic, and now the means for banishing the shovel and eradicating soot, cinders and coal dust and fumes from the home lies within the budget of even very modestly supported households."

"Savings in fuel costs, in labor, in ash removal, in laundry bills, in drying, cleaning and renewal of draperies and upholstering materials, all these are accomplished by the Williams Oil-O-Matic model J oil burner which is offered the public at the latest refinement in oil-burning methods, after 10 years' success in manufacturing oil-burners. Home-owners are proving themselves quick to see the new advantages derived from the use of special light alloys and lightweight, efficient die-castings."

"Among all household utilities, the oil burner is fastest growing in popularity. One million are in use in North America by the end of 1935. The immense supply of oil which is used as the clean, economical, working fuel is constantly increasing. Local popularity of the Williams Oil-O-Matic is constantly increasing, especially since Harvie Whitman, district oil-burning engineer, joined the local Oil-O-Matic as installing engineer."

Due to the central location of this busy cylinder grinding company and its accessibility to Atlanta people and visitors, car owners who are not satisfied with the performance of their car would do well if they drove it by the shop and explained their troubles to any one of the four Camps on the job.

FARMERS TO VOTE AGAINST HOOVER FOR LAND LOSSES
Washington, September 23.—(United News.)—Farmers are fully convinced that Herbert Hoover, the republican presidential nominee, is unsympathetic with their cause, former Senator Hansborough, of North Dakota, said in a statement issued today by the democratic national committee.

Farm values have deflated $3,611,000,000 in five states during the period of republican rule, the ex-senator declared. This is the most potent argument the Smith Independent league, of which he is chairman, is offering the farmers, Hansborough said.

Headquarters of the league recently have been opened in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

RICH HARLEM NEGRO IS HELD FOR RANSOM
New York, September 23.—(AP)—Casper Holstein, wealthy Harlem negro sportsman, real estate operator and philanthropist, is being held for $50,000 ransom by kidnapers who have threatened to kill him if the money is not forthcoming and if the police, who have arrested five suspects, do not withdraw from the case entirely.

Holstein himself revealed his plight today when he telephoned Denis Armstrong, of the Monarch Lodge of Colored Elks, that he was kidnapped by seven men and a woman shortly after midnight Friday in a hallway at 205 West 145th street.

Police were notified of Holstein's disappearance Friday, investigation showed they had been telephoned by a wealthy negro woman who lived at the 145th street address at 11:40 a. m. Thursday night that he would call at 12. He was seen to drive up to the house. He dismissed his chauffeur and went into the hallway. Twenty minutes later four white men, all with revolvers, were seen to bring him out.

He was placed in an automobile and driven east to Seventh avenue, a second automobile containing the woman, believed to have been white, and two other men followed.

Police also learned that Holstein was known to have had $7,000 in cash and a $3,000 diamond ring at the time he was kidnapped.

Saturday night police arrested Michael Bernstein, 30, the Bronx, charged with the act of kidnapping, and three white men and a negro charged with acting in concert with him. They still are seeking the white woman and the other men, believed to be negroes. The four other arrested described themselves as Peter Donohue, 27, a salesman; Anthony D'Agostino, 30; Moe (Monty) Schubert, 30, and Rudolph Brown, 32, negro.

Holstein, police say, is said to be worth $500,000 and is an intimate friend of John Jackson, Chicago negro millionaire.

Jackson arrived in New York today and took charge of the efforts to obtain his release.

Holstein is a native of the Virgin Islands and he recently sent a shipload of lumber there to aid the hurricane sufferers and it is said that the $7,000 he had in his possession was to purchase more lumber.

ed Secretary of State Kellogg to advise the Canadian authorities that warrants and extradition papers are en route to Vancouver for Norcross and his mother, Mrs. Sarah Louise Norcross, who is jointly accused of murder with her son.

Cylinder Grinding Company Is Adding New Life to Cars

"When we moved from 86 Walton to 174 Walton street—our present location," says J. A. Camp, manager of the Camp Cylinder Grinding company, "we made a good move, for it gave us more than 5,000 more square feet of working room, and with this additional floor space we are getting out more work than we have ever done before."

This firm is the pioneer cylinder grinding company of this part of Georgia, having always had a well-equipped machine shop. A few years ago fully going over all cars which are could get several thousand more miles out of their car if the cylinders were reground, which permitted their cars to run smoothly again.

Crank shaft regrounding is a specialty of this firm as well as cylinder boring. The Camp organization can do this kind of work in its shop or put a small electrically driven machine in the back of a truck and do the work anywhere electric current is available.

The Camp Cylinder Grinding company since moving in its new location has added much new equipment and expert mechanics, and it is carefully going over all cars that are driven or towed into its repair department. When the workmen get through regrounding the power parts of a car the owner can feel the thrill again of driving a car that performs like new and at the same time saves big money costs.

Due to the central location of this busy cylinder grinding company and its accessibility to Atlanta people and visitors, car owners who are not satisfied with the performance of their car would do well if they drove it by the shop and explained their troubles to any one of the four Camps on the job.

Window Cleaning Company Is Now Having Busy Season

In a large city like Atlanta there is a great amount of window and office cleaning to be done daily, and Atlanta is fortunate to have several large companies that are well equipped to do much of this work outside of regular business hours.

One of the oldest and most favorably known is the National Window and Office Cleaning company, of 18 1/2 Ivy street, which started here some 18 or 17 years ago and has an efficient organization of competent and reliable workmen.

This firm has just passed through one of the busiest two months work it has ever had, according to William Silver, one of the proprietors.

"We started house cleaning earlier than usual this year," stated Mr. Silver, "and just as soon as we would get through with one home in a neighborhood we would be called right back in the same neighborhood to clean another home."

"In our office work and cleaning of new buildings," added S. C. Orr, president of this firm, "we seem to be rendering our old customers satisfactory service, and in the new building just being completed by our contractor friends, we prove that we can do this kind of work cheaper and quicker than they could do it themselves."

"Take the new general office buildings of the Southern railway at Mitchell and Spring streets. Here is the largest single cleaning job to be done since the Sears-Roebuck building was built. We followed behind the contractors and every window and floor of this two-block-long building will be cleaned by Tuesday night."

"We begin today to clean a large building in Rome that is just being completed by Barze-Thompson, well-known Atlanta contractors. This new building, like the Southern railway building, was given to us to clean because we are one of the very few cleaning companies that protect our workmen under the compensation law and protect the building or home-owner against all property loss by theft or breakage while we have workmen on the job."

The office manager here, W. A. Malone, stated that the National Window Cleaning company had very little trouble about accounts, for its workmen do their work so quickly and so well that there is nothing to complain about. At the same time customers know that they are having their work done by the best cleaning company in the business.

Beginning the Story of Our War With Spain.

Spanish Misrule and American Interest in Cuba.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

FROM THE TIME IT WAS DISCOVERED BY COLUMBUS TO THE CLOSING YEARS OF THE 19TH CENTURY THE ISLAND OF CUBA HAD BELONGED TO SPAIN. CUBA AND THE NEIGHBORING ISLAND OF PORTO RICO WERE ALL THAT REMAINED OF THE MIGHTY EMPIRE SPAIN HAD OWNED IN THE NEW WORLD.

FOR YEARS THE CUBANS HAD SUFFERED UNDER THE HARSH AND CORRUPT RULE OF SPANISH OFFICIALS WHO EXPLOITED THE ISLAND FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE MOTHER COUNTRY, KEPT THE PEOPLE IN IGNORANCE, AND DENIED THEM CIVIL, POLITICAL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

THE PLIGHT OF THE UNFORTUNATE ISLANDERS AROUSED THE SYMPATHY OF AMERICANS. LYING CLOSE TO THE UNITED STATES, A COMMANDING ENTRANCE TO THE GULF OF MEXICO, CUBA HAD ALWAYS CAUSED OUR GOVERNMENT GREAT CONCERN.

IT WAS ESSENTIAL TO OUR NATIONAL SAFETY THAT CUBA SHOULD NOT BE HELD BY A POWERFUL OR HOSTILE NATION. WE WERE INTERESTED IN CUBA, TOO, BECAUSE AMERICANS HAD INVESTED MILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN CUBAN SUGAR AND TOBACCO PLANTATIONS.

TOMORROW—THE TEN YEARS' WAR FOR CUBAN LIBERTY.

Palm Beach Winter Season Not To Be Affected by Storm

BY EMILIE C. KEYES
Staff Writer for the Palm Beach Post.
Miss Keyes is a graduate of Agnes Scott college, Decatur, class of 1920. She is a niece of Hal F. Hentz, Atlanta architect, of the firm of Hentz, Alder and Schutze. Miss Keyes lived in Atlanta for about 10 years until her graduation. She has been a staff writer on the Post in West Palm Beach for five years and is one of the staff members who have worked day and night for the last week gathering the news from the entire storm area.

Palm Beach, Fla., September 23.—The Palm Beach winter season will in no way be affected by the hurricane, in the opinion of Mayor Barclay D. Warburton, who arrived at midnight Friday from Philadelphia.

Standing amidst the wreckage of the magnificent furnishings in his lake-front home, Mayor Warburton discussed rehabilitation for the community. He had traveled for five days to reach Palm Beach, held up by storm conditions down the entire coast. The mayor announced that he had arrived to stay until May, and was planning immediately into his official duties.

The Breakers hotel will open as it always does, promptly in December. Mayor Warburton said after conference with H. E. Beggs, vice president of the Florida East Coast hotel company, and all other Palm Beach activities are expected to be commensurate with the efforts to have all hotels functioning as usual.

"From foundations to gutters" were the orders issued to contractors by Mayor Warburton as he surveyed the battered walls of his house, the wreckage of his priceless antiques, and the razed grounds of his estate.

His orders are expected to be echoed by all other Palm Beach residents, the majority of whom are expected to make personal trips to Palm Beach to supervise repairs to their estates. J. Leonard Replogle and Gurney Munn are expected Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. George Mesker have already arrived, and Cooper C. Lightbrown is also here.

Prior to leaving Philadelphia Mayor Warburton issued an appeal for cash contributions for relief work here, although at that time he had no idea of the extent of the destruction. The morning mail had brought him $15,000 in checks, he said, and others were expected daily.

Expectation that from emergency conditions there would arise a movement to aid persons of moderate means to whom the storm damage is a final blow, was expressed by Mayor Warburton.

"The most serious problem, after emergencies are met," he said, "is to be found among persons of moderate means, whose homes have been heavily mortgaged and a last hope of security for further business activity is now swept away. I am hopeful that a committee will grow out of this necessity to meet the situation."

Mayor Warburton spent most of the day making a complete survey of the Palm Beach ocean-front homes owned by his friends. The Rodman Wainmaker estate, he said, on the Ocean boulevard, was seriously damaged by water; the Edward Shearson place was practically undamaged; the John S. Phipps place sustained minor damage.

CHARLES J. HARRELL IS LAID TO FINAL REST

Barnesville, September 23.—(Special.)—Charles James Harrell, well-known citizen and Confederate veteran of Lamar county died here Friday night following a stroke of paralysis. He had been in failing health for the past few years. He was in his eighty-fourth year, having been born July 19, 1845. He had lived all his life in this section of the state. In 1878 he married Miss Martha Pickard, who died in 1889. They had six children, three of whom are living now. He married Miss Nettie Virdin in 1891 and seven children were born.

The funeral was held Saturday at the First Baptist church, Barnesville. Rev. W. W. Childs, a friend of Mr. Harrell conducted the funeral. The body was buried in Greenwood cemetery in the family burying ground.

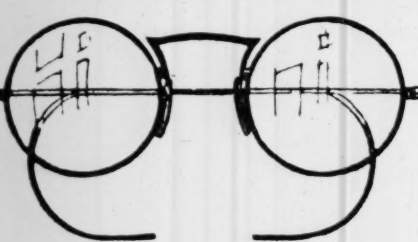

MRS. W. R. PARLIER LAID TO LAST REST

Rome, Ga., September 23.—Mrs. W. R. Parlier, aged 43, died Friday after a long illness. Mrs. Parlier had lived practically all her life in Rome. Before her marriage she was Miss Mayne Shelton.

She is survived by her husband and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Shelton, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. R. B. Drake, Florida; Horace Shelton, Atlanta; J. W. Shelton, Macon; W. S. Shelton, Mrs. W. F. Lacy, Miss Alta Mae Shelton and Mrs. J. M. Saylor, all of Rome. Funeral services were held Sunday.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF COTTON MARKET

New Orleans, September 23.—(AP)—After making a new low for the season on Wednesday, the December option down to 16.65, the cotton market experienced a sharp rally in the second half of the week and by the close on Saturday, December had recovered 138 points from the low to 18.01, a rally of practically $7 a bale.

The decline of the early part of the week was due to the failure of the tropical storm to penetrate into the cotton belt and the fact that it kept close to the Atlantic coast line created the impression that it had done little damage. This caused traders who had bought in anticipation of the hurricane damaging a large section of the cotton belt, to liquidate their holdings. There was, moreover, a liberal hedge selling against the heavier movement of cotton to market and the large sales at interior markets.

The selling was also bid by scale down trade buying so that by Thursday when reports came in that the storm had actually done much damage in the eastern portions of Georgia and the Carolinas, the market was in a favorable technical position to respond quickly to the covering by the shorts. The speculative buying which came into the market as a result of the reports of increasing crop deterioration.

The following shows the high, low and closing sales in the New Orleans futures market during the past week compared with a year ago:

| | High | Low | Last |
|----------|-------|-------|-------|
| October | 17.88 | 16.51 | 17.86 |
| December | 18.01 | 16.63 | 18.00 |
| January | 18.02 | 16.64 | 18.00 |
| March | 18.00 | 16.75 | 18.03 |
| May | 18.07 | 16.75 | 18.04 |

BOY GIVES LIFE IN SAVING GIRL ON RAILROAD BED

Newburne, Tenn., September 23.—(AP)—John Haney is a hero on his sixteenth birthday—but he is dead. He gave his life to save Mary Ruth Aker, 18, and "just a friend."

Haney and the girl were among a group of young persons returning to their homes near here last night from a show, when Miss Aker decided to walk down the Illinois Central railroad track ahead of her companions. On an embankment between two crosses, the Panama Limited, cracked Chicago-New Orleans limited, rounded a curve and bore down upon her. Terrified, she began running into the face of the locomotive.

With a cry of "I'd give my life to save her," Haney dashed up the embankment and roughly shoved her down its side. She tumbled to the pavement below, uninjured, but the engine caught the youth and dragged him to his death.

Today was his sixteenth birthday.

FIANCEE SINGS FOR EXPLORER ON WAY TO POLE

New York, September 23.—(AP)—Suzanne Bennett, fiancée of George N. Wilkins, who is on board the Southern Cross to lead his own Antarctic expedition, sang a special program to him over Station WJIN tonight from 10:30 to 11 o'clock. This was the first of a series of radio greetings they hope to exchange while Wilkins seeks adventure at the south pole.

Red Cross Workers To Aid Hurricane Victims

LIQUOR IS SENT TO STORM AREA HEAVILY GUARDED

Tampa, Fla., September 23.—(AP)—With truckloads of liquor being sent to the storm area for ill and exposed victims and exhausted relief workers, every precaution is being taken to protect the legalized shipments from hijackers on the highways. It was learned here tonight.

Guards accompany the truckloads of seized liquors and wine and radio messages asking for liquor and those telling of its shipment are carefully coded so as not to reveal their true meaning.

A radio message for "more turpentine" or any such other commodity might mean a request for liquor, and there is no flag waving or ballyhoo when the liquor, once destined for the sewers, starts out.

Releases of seized liquor were authorized from Washington by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, in charge of prohibition enforcement, after realizing the great need for stimulants in the stricken territory.

Most of it is being supplied from east coast cities and Jacksonville. Tampa's supply of "good liquor" has been at a low ebb, and most of that has been official supply in the defense of the large dry sentiment of its own party, has dragged it into politics.

HINT SECOND CRIME IN KENTUCKY PROBE OF WOMAN'S DEATH

Murfreesboro, Ky., September 23.—(AP)—With Dr. and Mrs. Garland Martin in jail on a charge of conspiring with the late William Farris to murder Miss Lula Kierchner, 40, of Cincinnati, authorities exhibited evidence which, they said, although "meagre," tended to show that Farris himself was slain.

The body of Miss Kierchner was discovered in a shallow grave in the basement of Farris' home Monday, 29 hours after his body, a shotgun beside it, was found outside the house. Two inquests into the death of Farris resulted in verdicts of suicide. A third probe has not been completed.

The Martins, whose home adjoins that of Farris, were arrested after a short investigation. Farris was found concealed on the porch of their home. Authorities intimated they hoped to identify this as the shirt worn by Farris on a night of August 17 when he was supposed to have met Miss Kierchner at Mammoth Cave to take her to his home.

Investigators said the Martins furnished Farris with a buggy and a lantern for the trip to Mammoth Cave. County Attorney C. B. Larimer said he believed Miss Kierchner was slain either at or near the Farris home on the night of the trip from Mammoth Cave.

BRADSTREET'S WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings in the United States for the week ending September 20, as reported to Bradstreet's Journal, aggregated $12,176,387,000, as against $11,322,000,000 before last and $11,211,963,000 in last week last year. BRUCE REFUSES TO DENY CHARGE AGAINST HOOVER

Baltimore, September 23.—(AP)—Senator William Cabell Bruce, Maryland's democratic representative in the upper branch of congress, today refused to make any withdrawal of the statement which he made last night in a speech at Westminster that Herbert Hoover and Clarence Darrow had had drinks together in Washington. Senator Bruce said he did not make the charges himself, but was quoting a newspaper story published some time ago, in which Darrow, noted criminal lawyer, of Chicago, had been quoted as saying that he had "had the pleasure of taking drinks with Mr. Hoover in Washington."

At the same time, Galen L. Tait, chairman of the republican state central committee, issued a statement in which he charged that Senator Bruce had started a "whispering" campaign against the republican nominees "even more vicious than that so strenuously objected to by Governor Smith," and demanded that the allegation made by Mr. Bruce be withdrawn.
